London Naval Treaty Awaits Senate Final Test

PRES. HOOVER SUMMONS SENATE SPECIAL SESSION

OVER WEEKEND AT RAPIDAN HE COMPLETES MESSAGE TO SOLONS

WILL BE HIS FIRST DIRECT APPEAL TO BODY IN BEHALF OF PACT

By LYLE C. WILSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, July 7—(UP)—The London naval treaty limiting the cruiser, destroyer and submarine fleets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States and postponing battleship replacement by those powers, awaited today its final test in the senate.

President Hoover summoned the senate to meet at noon in special session to consider the treaty. Over the week-end at his Rapidan, Va., camp, the president completed the message which will be his first direct appeal to the senate in behalf of the pact.

At this week-end conference, the president decided, however, not to have the message read at the opening session today unless a quorum is present. Majority Leader Watson has indicated he does not expect a quorum today, but believes the requisite number, 49, would be present tomorrow.

If consideration is prolonged and senators leave the capital, Watson said the senate sergeant-at-arms would be instructed to go to their homes and compel their return. Such action would be unprecedented and Watson said he did not believe it would be necessary.

As the fight opened, administration leaders were confident of ratification provided a vote is reached within 10 days. The strategy of the opposition leaders, veteran senators of Mr. Hoover's own party, is to delay the vote in the hope of making a point of no quorum and obtaining a recess until next autumn.

Party lines have disappeared in the treaty dispute, with such republican senators as Johnson, Calif., Moses, N. H., Robinson, Ind., Oddie, Nev., and Hale, Me., opposing the president on his most important foreign policy. One of the opposing leaders, Hale, is chairman of the naval affairs committee.

Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee has indicated he will vote for the treaty, but has refused to lead the fight for ratification. Thus the first normal plea for the treaty will be made at the opening of debate by Senator Swanson of Virginia, ranking democrat of the foreign relations committee.

Indications were, that a prominent part in the ratification fight would be played by Senator Allen, rep., Kas., a leader in the "Young Turk" group. One of the late pre-session developments was a long statement by Allen defending the treaty and demanding early ratification. Allen asserted the opposition springs from "the admiralities of all nations."

Another late development was a statement citing the position of the navy league of the United States as opposed to the treaty.

The navy league, after careful consideration of the reasons which have been stated in favor of and against the treaty, regrets that it cannot express approval of the treaty," the statement said.

Washington, July 7—(UP)—Nine more senators than the 49 required to obtain a quorum answered roll call today when the special treaty session summoned by President Hoover met at noon. This made certain the treaty debate would open at once.

Vice President Curtis appointed Senators Watson, republican, Indiana, and Walsh, democrat, Montana, to inform Mr. Hoover the senate was ready to receive any communications he might desire to make. The senate recessed for 15 minutes awaiting the president's treaty message. z

BRITAIN PLEADS TARIFF MAY NOT BE INVOKED QUICKLY

London, July 7—(UP)—A plea by Great Britain against sudden enforcement of the new United States tariff has been forwarded to Washington, it was disclosed today.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to the United States, was instructed by his government to ask the United States to allow British ships already enroute to unload their cargoes without interference. The plea was on the ground that it is manifestly unjust to enforce the new tariff suddenly, without warning to shipping.

The tariff became effective when it was signed by President Hoover and there was a rush of ships in transit to make American ports before the new rates were started.

LEGION SEEKS TO CHANGE STATE BOXING LAWS

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7—(UP)—The committee which will plan the fight of the American Legion to change state boxing laws will meet at Crooks' on August 4, just prior to the opening of the state convention. Legion officials announced today. The meeting had originally been scheduled for Sunday. The Legion seeks to remove the ban on fights outside of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

INSINUATIONS OF CORRUPTION IN JOURNALISM

THREATEN TO TAKE PRECEDURE OVER THE QUESTION OF WHO KILLED LINGLE

WIDE DIVERGENCE OF OPINION EXPRESSED AS TO METHODS OF INVESTIGATION

Chicago, July 7—(UP)—Insinuations of corruption in Chicago journalism have become so numerous since the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, that they threatened to take precedence today over the question of who killed Lingle and why.

Over the week-end a wide divergence of opinion as to proper methods of investigating the murder and ugly rumors which followed it developed among the powerful Chicago newspapers which adopted a resolution four weeks ago pledging unlimited cooperation toward breaking the underworld's grip upon the city.

The resolution, however, was adopted before it was known generally that Lingle had betrayed his journalistic trust through a personal alliance with the underworld. Today the publishers appeared to be no less determined to stand united in cleaning up Chicago, but they were far from united on methods of dealing with the insinuations that numerous other reporters are as much racketeers as Lingle was.

Although rumors of racketeering by other reporters have been plentiful since Lingle was killed four weeks ago, it remained for an outside newspaper to bring them before the public. Frank W. Taylor, Jr., editor of the St. Louis Star, sent Harry T. Brundage, a reporter, to Chicago to write a series of dispatches about the Lingle case and its ramifications. Within a few days the Star began publication of the reporter's stories, which contained charges of wholesale racketeering among Chicago newspapermen. The Chicago Tribune reprinted them.

A new grand jury, which was to be sworn in today, faced the double task of clearing up the Lingle murder and the whole crime situation in general since the Lingle case has, in one way or another, been connected either in rumor or fact which almost all the crime and alleged crime activities in the city.

A new request that the grand jury examine fully the charges made by Brundage was sent last night by Col. McCormick to State's Attorney John A. Swanson.

"It is natural that during such investigation a multitude of rumors should have arisen, many of them highly imaginative, it would seem, but some of them very definite and strongly supported," wrote McCormick. "In fact, the names of certain newspaper officials have been bandied around until they are popularly accepted as guilty."

"It seems to me in justice to these men full investigation should be made to establish the innocent and the guilty and also to free from the entire profession the stigma which has been created by the wide dissemination of rumors of all kinds."

He then said, the revelations of the last few weeks have been distressing to many of us. We wish the matters exposed had never occurred. We tend to wish that soiled linen be not washed in public, but out of so much evil a great good may come. The activities of Lingle and men of his stripe are like paths leading into the forest of crime which hitherto have proven trackless. By following them the whole criminal organization which has Chicago by its throat may be surrounded and destroyed.

After stating that the special board of strategy, headed by Charles Rathbun, Tribune attorney and special assistant state's attorney, more than has its hands full with the Lingle investigation, McCormick ended his letter by requesting that a full investigation of all rumors concerning Chicago journalists be carried on by "your regular staff or by special counsel competent to make such investigation."

The presence of Rathbun on the board of strategy was criticised today by the Herald-Examiner in a news story as follows: "Further, public de-

Goodyear Zeppelin Apparently Has Won the 1930 National Balloon Race with 850 Miles

FLIES FROM HOUSTON, TEX. TO GREENSBURG, KY.

GOODYEAR ZEPPELIN LAST TO REPORT OF 15 ENTRIES IN RACE

OTHERS ACCOUNTED FOR IN VARIOUS SECTIONS OF ARKANSAS, TEXAS, KENTUCKY

Houston, Tex., July 7—(UP)—The Goodyear Zeppelin of Akron, O., apparently won the 1930 national balloon races.

The Goodyear entry landed at Greensburg, Ky., some 850 miles from the starting point here, its pilots, R. J. Blair and F. A. Trotter, advised race headquarters today. They did not give their time of landing.

The Goodyear Zeppelin was the last to report of the 15 entries that left here at dusk Friday. The 14 others were accounted for in various sections of Arkansas, Texas and Kentucky.

Akron, O., July 7—(UP)—The Goodyear Zeppelin balloon crew today reported to the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company that their entry in the National Balloon race landed Sunday afternoon at Greensburg, Ky.

Greensburg is about 900 miles from Houston which would make the Goodyear winner of the race.

It has been made that the case be removed from the dominion of a board headed by the attorney for the paper that employed Lingle.

COUNTRY CLUB BOUNCER IS SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7—(UP)—Seriously wounded, Mike Tobin, Oak Park Country Club, "bouncer," today refused to name his assailant. Tobin is in Ethel hospital where he was taken after being shot twice in an argument outside the club. Police were seeking a former convict in connection with affray. Tobin and the convict were known to have quarrelled shortly before the shooting.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7—(UP)—Jay Wilfred Curtis, 56, treasurer and general counsel for the Scripps-Canfield chain of newspapers, died today at his home.

Death, coming at 3 a. m., ended a protracted period of illness. Curtis' condition had grown steadily worse since an operation on March 24.

From 1916 to 1921 he was general counsel for the Scripps newspaper interests, the United Press and the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

He later became an important stockholder, treasurer and general counsel for the Scripps-Canfield newspapers, positions he held until the time of his death.

Magistrate Indicted on Fraudulent Use of Mails

New York, July 7—(UP)—Magistrate George F. Ewald and five other persons were indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of conspiracy and using the mails to defraud in connection with sale of stock of the Cotter Butte Mining Company.

It is natural that during such investigation a multitude of rumors should have arisen, many of them highly imaginative, it would seem, but some of them very definite and strongly supported," wrote McCormick. BRIAND PROPOSING ECONOMIC UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

Rome, July 7—(UP)—Italy replied today to Aristide Briand's proposal for an economic united states of Europe, expressing readiness to collaborate, but insisting that first and above all it would be necessary to solve the problems of the general reduction of armaments.

"Disarmament constitutes a pre-eminent fundamental for the efficacious co-operation of nations, as well as the solution of the problem of security," the reply said.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE DIES TODAY

NOTED BRITISH AUTHOR, FAMOUS FOR STORIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

HAD BEEN SUFFERING FROM HEART TROUBLE FOR LONG PERIOD

Crowborough, England, July 7—(UP)—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle died today at 9:15 a. m.

Sir Arthur, famous for his stories of Sherlock Holmes, had been reported seriously ill of heart trouble only a short time before his death was announced.

His condition had caused some anxiety, however, for the last two months, although he had not been considered in a critical condition until shortly before his death.

Lady Conan Doyle, the former Jean Leckie, and two sons and a daughter were at the bedside when Sir Arthur died at Wimplesham, his home here.

He was 71 years old, having been born at Edinburgh on May 22, 1859, the son of Charles Doyle, an artist.

JAY WILFRED CURTS, NEWSPAPER MAN, DIES

Oakland, Calif., July 7—(UP)—Jay Wilfred Curtis, 56, treasurer and general counsel for the Scripps-Canfield chain of newspapers, died today at his home.

Death, coming at 3 a. m., ended a protracted period of illness. Curtis' condition had grown steadily worse since an operation on March 24.

From 1916 to 1921 he was general counsel for the Scripps newspaper interests, the United Press and the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

ARMED POSSES SEARCH COUNTRY FOR 3 NEGROES

TOTAL LIST OF KILLED SO FAR RESULTS IN DEATHS OF 5 MEN AND 1 WOMAN

Emelle, Ala., July 7—(UP)—Armed posses, urged on by an offer by Governor Bib Graves of $300 reward, searched the countryside today for three negroes, members of a family whose shooting of a white man on the afternoon of July 4th started one of the worst race riots Alabama has seen in the last four years, and which so far has resulted in the death of five men and one woman.

The small negro settlement of West Bessemer, a few miles from here, was deserted. Frightened negroes had left their cabins and camped under trees at the homes of friendly whites.

Two negroes were killed yesterday by posses when they disobeyed orders to halt for identification.

Mrs. Jesse Dial was shot when her husband refused to stop their automobile at the posse's command. Her husband fled when the posses opened fire.

An unidentified negro, standing in the doorway of the Mobile and Ohio railroad station, fired at a posse, wounding one of them. He was killed in the exchange of shots.

The men killed previously were Grover Boyd and Charles Marro, white men, and John and Esau Robinson, negroes.

That job has been turned over to two Indiana republican stalwarts, Floor Leader Watson of the senate and Rep. Will Wood, chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee.

Watson will start work Thursday with a speech over a national radio hookup. His subject will be "The Achievements of the Hoover Administration." A statement on this topic was issued today through the republican national committee by Rep. Temple, rep., Pa., newly-appointed chairman of the house foreign affairs committee. Temple, however, confined encomiums to the international field, asserting the administration had to its credit two major achievements since Mr. Hoover became president 16 months ago.

Negotiations of the London naval treaty head the list.

For this part, Rep. Wood already has retained George B. Lockwood, publisher of the National Republican, to act as public adviser to the congressional committee. Lockwood has been prominent in republican publicity circles during the past 10 years and his work will augment that of the National Committee's Publicity Bureau.

London Naval Treaty Awaits Senate Final Test

PRES. HOOVER SUMMONS SENATE SPECIAL SESSION

OVER WEEKEND AT RAPIDAN HE COMPLETES MESSAGE TO SOLONS

WILL BE HIS FIRST DIRECT APPEAL TO BODY IN BEHALF OF FACT

By LYLE C. WILSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, July 7.—(UP)—The London naval treaty limiting the cruiser, destroyer and submarine fleets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States and postponing battleship replacement by those powers, awaited today its final test in the senate.

President Hoover summoned the senate to meet at noon in special session to consider the treaty. Over the weekend at his Rapidan, Va., camp, the president completed the message which will be his first direct appeal to the senate in behalf of the pact.

At this week-end conference, the president decided, however, not to have the message read at the opening session today unless a quorum is present. Majority Leader Watson has indicated he does not expect a quorum today, but believes the requisite number, 49, would be present tomorrow.

INSINUATIONS OF CORRUPTION IN JOURNALISM

THREATEN TO TAKE PRECEDURE OVER THE QUESTION OF WHO KILLED LINGLE

WIDE DIVERGENCE OF OPINION EXPRESSED AS TO METHODS OF INVESTIGATION

Chicago, July 7.—(UP)—Insinuations of corruption in Chicago journalism have become so numerous since the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, that they threatened to take precedence today over the question of who killed Lingle and why.

Over the week-end a wide divergence of opinion as to proper methods of investigating the murder and ugly rumors which followed it developed among the powerful Chicago newspapers which adopted a resolution four weeks ago pledging unlimited cooperation toward breaking the underworld's grip upon the city.

The resolution, however, was adopted before it was known generally that Lingle had betrayed his journalistic trust through a personal alliance with the underworld. Today the publishers appeared to be no less determined to stand united in cleaning up Chicago, but they were far from united on methods of dealing with the insinuations that numerous other reporters are as much racketeers as Lingle was.

Although rumors of racketeering by other reporters have been plentiful since Lingle was killed four weeks ago, it remained for an outside newspaper to bring them before the public. Frank W. Taylor, Jr., editor of the St. Louis Star, sent Harry T. Brundage, a reporter, to Chicago to write a series of dispatches about the Lingle case and its ramifications. Within a few days the Star began publication of the reporter's stories, which contained charges of wholesale racketeering among Chicago newspapermen. The Chicago Tribune reprinted them.

A new grand jury, which was to be sworn in today, faced the double task of clearing up the Lingle murder and the whole crime situation in general since the Lingle case has, in one way or another, been connected either in rumor or fact which almost all the crime and alleged crime activities in the city.

A new request that the grand jury examine fully the charges made by Brundage was sent last night by Col. McCormick to State's Attorney John A. Swanson.

"It is natural that during such investigation a multitude of rumors should have arisen, many of them highly imaginative, it would seem, but some of them very definite and strongly supported," wrote McCormick. "In fact, the names of certain newspaper officials have been bandied around until they are popularly accepted as guilty."

"It seems to me in justice to these men full investigation should be made to establish the innocent and the guilty and also to free from the entire profession the stigma which has been created by the wide dissemination of rumors of all kinds."

He then said, the revelations of the last few weeks have been distressing to many of us. We wish the matters exposed had never occurred. We tend to wish that soiled linen be not washed in public but out of so much evil a great good may come. The activities of Lingle and men of his stripe are like paths leading into the forest of crime which hitherto have proven trackless. By following them the whole criminal organization which has Chicago by its throat may be surrounded and destroyed.

After stating that the special board of strategy, headed by Charles Rathbun, Tribune attorney and special assistant state's attorney, more than has its hands full with the Lingle investigation, McCormick ended his letter by requesting that a full investigation of all rumors concerning Chicago journalists be carried on by "your regular staff or by special counsel competent to make such investigation."

The presence of Rathbun on the board of strategy was criticized today by the Herald-Examiner in a news story as follows: "Further, public de-

Superior, Wis., July 7.—(UP)—Injured when his car somersaulted on a highway in the Superior suburbs, George H. Johnson, 30, Abbot avenue, S., Minneapolis, died in the hospital last night.

Johnson was hurt early Wednesday. A salesman for the Thompson Hardware Co., he came here last Tuesday to attend the firm's annual sales convention.

James Jerston, Minneapolis, Johnson's companion, was also hurt in the accident and is in the hospital in critical condition.

Duluth, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—Playing with matches cost two children their lives yesterday.

Marguerite and Francis Godrue, nine and seven years old, took some matches under the porch. In their play they lighted the matches and set fire to rubbish.

While their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Godrue, a widow screened for air and watched the flames lick round the column of the porch, the children were burned to death.

Two dwellings were destroyed in the fire.

Faribault, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—Flung out of his car and under its wheels as the machine rounded a corner, Bert Shauts died in the hospital last night. His skull was fractured and his chest crushed in the accident. The door of his car opened as he turned the corner and the momentum threw him from the machine. He had returned from South Dakota to spend the Fourth of July holiday with relatives.

REMOVAL OF FRANKIE FOSTER IS TEMPORARILY BLOCKED

Los Angeles, Cal., July 7.—(UP)—The removal of Frankie Foster, gangster, to Chicago where he is wanted in connection with the slaying of Alfred Lingle, was temporarily blocked today by a writ of habeas corpus served on Sheriff William I. Trager.

Chicago authorities had planned to take Foster back to the eastern city tonight.

48 MINNESOTA FARMERS HOME FROM LONG TOUR

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—Back from a trip through Yellowstone Park and western agricultural regions 48 Minnesota farmers returned to their homes today. The trip was sponsored by the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

On account of the heavy rains and the high water resulting therefrom railroad men are experiencing some rather hard times these days. The Minnesota and International has been most seriously affected by the high water. There were two washouts up the line yesterday and the passengers did not get down until after 3 o'clock. The most serious washout was at Jenkins. A stub train was run up from Brainerd to meet the regular passenger from Jenkins. This morning the report comes that there is a washout near Crow Wing and that while trains may pass over the track there is some danger.

There was an adjourned meeting last evening of the city council called for the purpose of hearing the report of City Engineer Woolman on the approximate cost of grading, curbing and macadamizing Laurel street from Seventh street to Eighth street. The estimated cost of the work according to Engineer Woolman's report will be about $1500. The report was on motion accepted. The city clerk will, as projected by the action of the council last Monday evening, advertise for bids to be in by the meeting to be held on July 17.

When a Dispatch representative visited the pump house this morning to make a personal examination of the condition there, he found the water just creeping onto the pump room floor. There is about 18 inches of water in the boiler room, but Supt. Judd Wright has had a concrete wall erected around the front of the boilers and secured a big diaphragm pump to keep out the water, and the boys say they can run as long as the engineer can dive down to the pump throffles. All joking aside, it will require over four feet further rise to put the pumps out of commission. The water company has a large amount of wood float and though it is secured by boom sticks it will cost a pretty penny to have it gathered up and will keep one man busy most of the summer.

For Stanhope, The Journey's End Is In Sight. . . No More To Kiss His Sweetheart's Lips. . . No More To Know Love and Beauty. . . No More To Know The Terror, The Agony of Men Who Must Be Brave!

No heroics, for Captain Stanhope and his men knew the fear that only brave men feel! No glorification, for these men did not want to die!

"The audience was a mass of cheering men and women. . . moved as rarely they had been moved."

—N. Y. WORLD

No blaring trumpets . . . for this is the story of men marching with eternity! Jeating in the thunder of the guns! Putting down their pipes and going out to die! From the noble, heart-breaking sacrifice of the men who might be your brothers, husbands, sons . . . comes emotion too deep to be told in words. . .

It Does Not Glorify War, But Human Character!

BRAINERD 25 Years Ago

July 7, 1905

On account of the heavy rains and the high water resulting therefrom railroad men are experiencing some rather hard times these days. The Minnesota and International has been most seriously affected by the high water. There were two washouts at the line yesterday and the passengers did not get down until after 3 o'clock. The most serious washout was at Jenkins. A stub train was run up from Brainerd to meet the regular passenger from Jenkins. This morning the report comes that there is a washout near Crow Wing and that while trains may pass over the track there is some danger.

There was an adjourned meeting last evening of the city council called for the purpose of hearing the report of City Engineer Woolman on the approximate cost of grading, curbing and macadamizing Laurel street from Seventh street to Eighth street. The estimated cost of the work according to Engineer Woolman's report will be about $1500. The report was on motion accepted. The city clerk will, as projected by the action of the council last Monday evening, advertise for bids to be in by the meeting to be held on July 17.

When a Dispatch representative visited the pump house this morning to make a personal examination of the condition there, he found the water just creeping onto the pump room floor. There is about 18 inches of water in the boiler room, but Supt. Judd Wright has had a concrete wall erected around the front of the boilers and secured a big diaphragm pump to keep out the water and the boys say they can run as long as the engine can dive down to the pump throffles. All joking aside, it will require over four feet further rise to put the pumps out of commission. The water company has a large amount of wood afloat and though it is secured by boom sticks it will cost a pretty penny to have it gathered up and will keep one man busy most of the summer.

For Stanhope, The Journey's End Is In Sight. . . No More To Kiss His Sweetheart's Lips. . . No More To Know Love and Beauty. . . No More To Know The Terror, The Agony of Men Who Must Be Brave!

No heroics, for Captain Stanhope and his men knew the fear that only brave men feel! No glorification, for these men did not want to die!

"The audience was a mass of cheering men and women. . . moved as rarely they had been moved."

No blaring trumpets . . . for this is the story of men marching with eternity! Jestling in the thunder of the guns! Putting down their pipes and going out to die! From the noble, heart-breaking sacrifice of the men who might be your brothers, husbands, sons . . . comes emotion too deep to be told in words. . .

It Does Not Glorify War, But Human Character!

HAYDON ICE CREAM FACTORY BLOWS UP

Former Brainerd Man Treated for Injuries From Flying Glass at Inglewood, Calif.

GAS BLAST BELIEVED CAUSE

Plate Glass Windows Near Scene Broken by Shock of the Heavy Explosion

The Haydon Ice cream factory, operated at Inglewood, Calif., by William F. Haydon, a former Brainerd business man, blew up, injuring five men, shattering plate glass windows in the vicinity, knocking out partitions and walls, and halting traffic. Most of those hurt, including Mr. Haydon, were cut by flying glass from the big windows and two men were injured by the concussion.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery. It was not caused by the ammonia fumes as these are not inflammable. Fumes from oil in the machinery room may have ignited from the pilot light under the boiler. Mr. Haydon before leaving Brainerd for California conducted a large ice cream manufacturing plant here.

CAMPAIGN TO SELL HOOVER ACHIEVEMENT

Later, after the special treaty session of the senate is adjourned, Lockwood may arrange a western tour for Watson through the territory which the president might have covered on his trip.

Mr. Hoover is said to feel that the condition of business, the situation in the stock market and the political crisis his party is facing in the November congressional elections dictate that he remain in Washington throughout the summer and early fall.

In addition, the president is confronted with the task of filling numerous important posts, the most troublesome of these being a successor to Claudius Huston as chairman of the republican national committee. Republican leaders have gone to considerable lengths to let Huston know his resignation is in order as a result of the senate lobby committee's disclosures concerning his activities, but thus far the Tennesseean has declined to abdicate.

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 7.—(UP)—Claudius Huston will resign as chairman of the Republican National Committee this week, the United Press learned from a reliable source today.

This information was disclosed following a conference last night between President Hoover and Huston, the first they have had in weeks since the disclosures before the senate lobby committee revealed Huston had temporarily diverted Muscle Shoals lobbying funds to his personal stock market margin account.

Chairman Huston, when told by the United Press of this information, said he could "neither confirm nor deny a report of that nature." He said he had no statement to make.

Officers of the Republican National Committee will meet here Thursday, the meeting having been postponed from today by Huston. It was learned Huston's resignation will occur before or at this meeting.

Republican leaders have been trying to displace Huston. Disclosures of the senate lobby committee concerning Huston's activities in connection with the Tennessee River Improvement Association, which was interested in Muscle Shoals legislation, created an unfavorable reaction among the party leaders. They reported it was difficult to raise party funds for the congressional campaign so long as Huston retained control and democrats were prepared to make what political capital they could out of the situation.

However, Huston rejected all hints from party leaders and insisted he would retain his post until President Hoover himself requested his resignation.

The president had several party leaders including senate majority leader, Watson; assistant leader, McNary and Senator Fess, repn., O., at his week-end Rapidan camp. Fess had been mentioned as a possible successor to Huston. He denied the Huston affair was discussed with the president over the week-end but Mr. Hoover, after arriving back at the White House Sunday, summoned Huston for a long conference.

When the meeting here this week first was called, there were rumors Huston intended to announce his resignation at that time, but when it was indicated later he had no such intention, President Hoover was represented as deciding to take a personal hand in the matter. The conference last night was regarded as the outgrowth of this decision.

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—Fifth and final dividend of 6.5 per cent amounting to $5,961 and bringing the total paid to date to 96.5 per cent was paid to depositors in the Farmers State Bank of Grey Eagle, closed on February 3, 1927.

NOT A SINGLE CAR MISHAP FOR ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—For the first time in years on a Sunday following a holiday, not a single auto accident was reported to police. Although thousands of cars brought citizens back to the city after a three-day holiday, not a crash occurred.

500 AUTOS ENTER CITY ON T. H. 27 IN 45 MIN. ON 4TH

While no official check was kept of the number of tourists and tourist cars in Brainerd and the lake region, it is generally recognized that during the past three days more people visited this section than at any other previous time.

As an idea of the heavy travel roads in this section experienced over the holiday, two boys in driving to Little Falls over Trunk Highway No. 27 counted over 500 autos during the 45 minutes it took them to reach the downriver town the morning of the Fourth.

One store owner on Highway No. 19 in the Gull Lake vicinity said he counted 74 cars pass in five minutes Sunday afternoon.

Donny, 2 Years Old, Inspects Rail Yards

Donald Stone of the dignified age of two years decided he wanted to see the world, and see it alone.

And so when no one was looking he walked from his play yard at the rear of his home at 119 Kingwood street and over to the Northern Pacific railway yards. A car inspector found him inspecting the yards in general and took him down to the ticket office.

Donny enjoyed his little hike this morning immensely. He was all smiles when N. P. employees questioned him, as to where he was going. When his mother Mrs. G. H. Stone came for him he gave a delightful squeal, hugged her and started telling "mommys" what a perfectly wonderful adventure he had.

Mystery Surrounds Burning of Truck

Mystery surrounds the burning of a Ford truck owned by Louis Johnstone, 804 8th avenue N. E. early Sunday.

The truck was in the back yard of the home. Flames shooting up from it attracted attention of people passing who turned in the alarm to the city fire department at 2:40 a. m. The cause of the fire is undetermined.

BEGIN WORK ON GIANT BOULDER DAM PROJECT

Washington, July 7.—(UP)—Government engineers today began work on the Giant Boulder Dam project on the Nevada-Arizona state line, authorized by congress to provide flood control irrigation and water power for the southwest and a water supply for Los Angeles, the interior department announced.

Beginning of construction of the dam, to be the largest in the world, was made possible by enactment of the second deficiency bill, which carried an appropriation of $10,600,000 for this purpose. Total cost of the dam and accompanying works will be $165,000,000.

Sleeve Treatment New Fashion Note

Mid-Summer Openings Displayed Longer Types for Dress, Coat.

The mid-season openings are over and relieved American buyers are returning. Apparently Paris is not plotting another revolution that will set the fashion world by the ears next fall. There is little change in such fundamentals as the silhouette, the length of skirts, the placing of the waistline, says a fashion writer in the New York Times.

Women will continue to have the triple personalities they adopted with such gusto once they realized the new roles changed fashions offered them—they will be tailored by day, somewhat masculine and entirely business-like at active sports, and ultra feminine in the evening. The couturiers chose this time to lavish their creative energy on new details, and succeeded, in the opinion of those who saw the collections, in developing current styles to the highest point of wearability that has ever been reached.

Not that Paris did not have its little joke here and there. Having excited every one about short sleeves, it coolly proceeded to lengthen sleeves again—and not only lengthened them, but made them so interesting that they became headlines. Few, very few, abbreviated examples were shown, while elaborate sleeve treatments appeared on both coats and dresses, the most talked-of being the Martini et Armand contribution which suggested the old leg-o'-mutton. At any rate, the matter of sleeves will probably settle itself without much fuss. No doubt everybody will be tired of short sleeves by the time summer ends. Women who took a lot of trouble to make their elbows presentable, and those with naturally beautiful arms can be happy in the sleeveless dress and jacket combination.

Cardigan Is Revived.

Chanel's private snicker consisted of reviving and featuring the simple cardigan, whose obituary has been written many times since the more fitted jacket replaced it in the earlier collections.

Coat news from the openings is encouraging. The story is that almost every type of coat is good. Practically all of the houses stressed the separate coat, but they wisely kept in mind the fact that not enough people can wear severely fitted lines to make them universal, and a great diversity of models was offered. Some coats are belted, some wrap around, some flare, some are straight, some have flat fur and others have long-haired furs. In brief, it will be a season of individuality so far as coats are concerned. You may select the type most becoming to you, pleasantly confident that it will be a coat of fashion as well. For fall all black coats will be important, as they invariably are. Monotone tweeds will be seen in browns—especially a dark brown with a wine cast—in bottle greens and dark red and green coats.

The ever-growing tendency to dress according to occasion was recognized in the increased prominence given at the openings to light-weight woolen tailored dresses for daytime and in the greater development and elaboration of the late afternoon dress for formal afternoon and informal evening. There are no frills about the new tailored dresses. A great many of them have a coat look. They emphasize a trim waist with a narrow belt of patent leather or kid.

Pleats Are Effective.

The evening mode remains much the same so far as color is concerned, but new accessories give it new life. Turquoise and garnet are probably in for a run, taton having sponsored the one—turquoise jewelry and turquoise blue slippers with a white frock—and Chanel the other. In general, accessories still harmonize with the costume during the day and contrast at night. Pleats, which vaguely threaten to supplant circular skirts altogether for daytime, make an effective appearance in some of the new evening dresses. Vionnet shows a new evening neckline, high in back and front, and drawn to the center. Fringe continues to be used more than had been expected. Lace is still very much in the picture, too, and travelers will rejoice. For no fabric suffers so little from being wedged into a suitcase between riding boots, a sports suit and a couple of new books.

The short evening wrap that is so wildly popular right now will be worn all summer, but it is a fashion too definitely dated to expect a long life. New wraps in the Paris collections are longer, and although some of them are still short in front they lengthen in back.

A number of new models seen at the Paris openings bring out some of the details mentioned. Vionnet's high-backed evening dresses in white crepe roma are attractive. Another of her creations, in banana color, has a bow with long ends, tied flippantly at the collar bone. One of her daytime dresses is simply made of gray crepe de chine but having great distinction, thanks to the fagoting, and the stand-up collar—for Vionnet insists upon a higher neckline for day as well as for evening.

Novel Sleeves and Fringe Feature This Frock From Paris.

Vionnet. Its ermine collar has a loop in back that falls into something first cousin to a bow.

An interesting model from Germaine Lecointe is a black frock which has a wide white jabot with a circular cut and similar shirred ruffles on the sleeves and these white touches show up just as prominently when you slip on the sleeveless cape jacket. A sleeve that is actually long but has a three-quarter look because of its elbow flounce is seen in a Marthe et Renee frock. This dress of black georgette with a white vestee also illustrates the new use of fringe on daytime clothes.

Shantung in Plain Colors.

Reversing the old combination of printed dress and plain jacket, new shantung dresses are appearing in plain colors, accompanied by fitted jackets of printed shantung. They are linked in different ways—one dress-maker uses print pockets and belt on her dresses. Sometimes the print of the jacket is echoed on the dress in the form of pipings, buttons and buttonholes. Or the background color of the print may be repeated in the frock and further emphasized by harmonizing accessories.

There is no question but that shantung will be much worn both in town and in the country this summer. Little tailored suits in navy and black are appearing. In bright colors and pastels it will be popular in the country and at the beaches, but one of the smartest possible combinations will be white with touches of high color in the accessories. The dress and jacket costume of cream-colored shantung, oyster white or palest blue green gives every indication of being a summer classic—an honor that it merits by reason of its combined coolness and chic. Sometimes the jacket is lined with bright-colored silk, and a suede belt of the same shade marks the waistline.

The fashion for white with dark accents was illustrated in a window which displayed a white flannel suit with a short buttoned coat. The blouse, scarf, and casual bows on the sleeves were fashioned of a dark print, small white stars scattered on a navy ground.

The latest thing in Paris fashions is the dark frock with the contrasting top. Every one is showing them. Practically all Worth's new dresses have yokes, pointed front and back, and short cap sleeves in a lighter color and material. Lenette's tweed dresses have square-cut yokes of white crepe de chine that divide the bodice horizontally in two. Lelong shows a few draped contrasting yokes, but usually places his color division lower and shows the whole blouse or simulated tunic in a light color, while skirt and coat are dark. Maggy Rouff attaches a dark skirt to a light princess tunic that stops just below the hip bones. Lucile Paray runs her light yoke into the dark skirt in a long point front and back. Martini et Armand show light bib yokes, sometimes attached, sometimes detachable, as does Jeanne Lanvin.

Pilgrims Using Busses

Since religious pilgrims of Persia have been prohibited, for political reasons, from going to Kerbela, which is in Iraq, they must, if possible, visit Meshed or Kum, so they have abandoned the picturesque caravan for auto bus travel. Teheranis have found that they can make the journey and return home in ten days instead of two months as in the old way.

Obedience

Kathrine Kestksl, Red agitator, said, anent domestic relations:

"I asked of a young American bride: 'Did not you and your husband have words over you coming to the beach alone? I understand that he did not want you to come.'

"Oh, no," said the bride, "we didn't have any words. I said I was going; he said I wasn't, and here I am."

HAYDON ICE CREAM FACTORY BLOWS UP

Former Brainerd Man Treated for Injuries From Flying Glass at Ingleswood, Calif.

GAS BLAST BELIEVED CAUSE

Plate Glass Windows Near Scene Broken by Shock of the Heavy Explosion

The Haydon Ice cream factory, operated at Ingleswood, Calif., by William F. Haydon, a former Brainerd business man, blew up, injuring five men, shattering plate glass windows in the vicinity, knocking out partitions and walls, and halting traffic. Most of those hurt, including Mr. Haydon, were cut by flying glass from the big windows and two men were injured by the concussion.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery. It was not caused by the ammonia fumes as these are not inflammable. Fumes from oil in the machinery room may have, ignited from the pilot light under the boiler. Mr. Haydon before leaving Brainerd for California conducted a large ice cream manufacturing plant here.

Later, after the special treaty session of the senate is adjourned, Lockwood may arrange a western tour for Watson through the territory which the president might have covered on his trip.

Mr. Hoover is said to feel that the condition of business, the situation in the stock market and the political crisis his party is facing in the November congressional elections dictate that he remain in Washington throughout the summer and early fall.

In addition, the president is confronted with the task of filling numerous important posts, the most troublesome of these being a successor to Claudius Huston as chairman of the republican national committee. Republican leaders have gone to considerable lengths to let Huston know his resignation is in order as a result of the senate lobby committee's disclosures concerning his activities, but thus far the Tennesseean has declined to abdicate.

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 7.—(UP)—Claudius Huston will resign as chairman of the Republican National Committee this week, the United Press learned from a responsible source today.

This information was disclosed following a conference last night between President Hoover and Huston, the first they have had in weeks since the disclosures before the senate lobby committee revealed Huston had temporarily diverted Muscle Shoals lobbying funds to his personal stock market margin account.

Chairman Huston, when told by the United Press of this information, said he could "neither confirm nor deny a report of that nature." He said he had no statement to make.

Officers of the Republican National Committee will meet here Thursday, the meeting having been postponed from today by Huston. It was learned Huston's resignation will occur before or at this meeting.

Republican leaders have been trying to displace Huston. Disclosures of the senate lobby committee concerning Huston's activities in connection with the Tennessee River Improvement Association, which was interested in Muscle Shoals legislation, created an unfavorable reaction among the party leaders. They reported it was difficult to raise party funds for the congressional campaign so long as Huston retained control and democrats were prepared to make what political capital they could out of the situation.

However, Huston rejected all hints from party leaders and insisted he would retain his post until President Hoover himself requested his resignation.

The president had several party leaders including senate majority leader, Watson; assistant leader, McNary and Senator Fess, rep., O., at his week-end Rapidan camp. Fess had been mentioned as a possible successor to Huston. He denied the Huston affair was discussed with the president over the week-end but Mr. Hoover, after arriving back at the White House Sunday, summoned Huston for a long conference.

When the meeting here this week first was called, there were rumors Huston intended to announce his resignation at that time, but when it was indicated later he had no such intention, President Hoover was represented as deciding to take a personal hand in the matter. The conference last night was regarded as the outgrowth of this decision.

NOT A SINGLE CAR MISHAP FOR ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—(UP)—For the first time in years on a Sunday following a holiday, not a single auto accident was reported to police. Although thousands of cars brought citizens back to the city after a three-day holiday, not a crash occurred.

500 AUTOS ENTER CITY ON T. H. 27 IN 45 MIN. ON 4TH

While no official check was kept of the number of tourists and tourist cars in Brainerd and the lake region, it is generally recognized that during the past 72 days more people visited this section than at any other previous time.

As an idea of the heavy travel roads in this section experienced over the holiday, two boys in driving to Little Falls over Trunk Highway No. 27 counted over 500 autos during the 45 minutes it took them to reach the downriver town the morning of the Fourth.

One store owner on Highway No. 19 in the Gull Lake vicinity said he counted 74 cars pass in five minutes Sunday afternoon.

Donny, 2 Years Old, Inspects Rail Yards

Donald Stone of the dignified age of two years decided he wanted to see the world, and see it alone.

And so when no one was looking he walked from his play yard at the rear of his home at 119 Kingwood street and over to the Northern Pacific railway yards. A car inspector found him inspecting the yards in general and took him down to the ticket office.

Donny enjoyed his little hike this morning immensely. He was all smiles when N. P. employees questioned him, as to where he was going. When his mother Mrs. G. H. Stone came for him he gave a delightful squeal, hugged her and started telling "mommys" what a perfectly wonderful adventure he had.

Mystery Surrounds Burning of Truck

Mystery surrounds the burning of a Ford truck owned by Louis Johnstone, 804 8th avenue N. E. early Sunday.

BEGIN WORK ON GIANT BOULDER DAM PROJECT

Washington, July 7.—(UP)—Government engineers today began work on the Giant Boulder Dam project on the Nevada-Arizona state line, authorized by congress to provide flood control irrigation and water power for the southwest and a water supply for Los Angeles, the interior department announced.

Beginning of construction of the dam, to be the largest in the world was made possible by enactment of the second deficiency bill, which carried an appropriation of $10,600,000 for this purpose. Total cost of the dam and accompanying works will be $165,000,000.

Sleeve Treatment New Fashion Note

Mid-Summer Openings Display Longer Types for Dress, Coat.

The mid-season openings are over and relieved American buyers are returning. Apparently Paris is not plotting another revolution that will set the fashion world by the ears next fall. There is little change in such fundamentals as the silhouette, the length of skirts, the placing of the waistline, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. Women will continue to have the triple personalities they adopted with such gusto once they realized the new roles changed fashions offered them—they will be tailored by day, somewhat masculine and entirely business-like at active sports, and ultra feminine in the evening. The couturiers chose this time to lavish their creative energy on new details, and succeeded, in the opinion of those who saw the collections, in developing current styles to the highest point of wearability that has ever been reached.

Not that Paris did not have its little joke here and there. Having excited every one about short sleeves, it coolly proceeded to lengthen sleeves again—and not only lengthened them, but made them so interesting that they became headlines. Few, very few, abbreviated examples were shown, while elaborate sleeve treatments appeared on both coats and dresses, the most talked-of being the Martial et Armand contribution which suggested the old leg-o-mutton. At any rate, the matter of sleeves will probably settle itself without much fuss. No doubt everybody will be tired of short sleeves by the time summer ends. Women who took a lot of trouble to make their elbows presentable, and those with naturally beautiful arms can be happy in the sleeveless dress and jacket combination.

Cardigan Is Revived.

Chanel's private snicker consisted of reviving and featuring the simple cardigan, whose obituary has been written many times since the more fitted jacket replaced it in the earlier collections.

Coat news from the openings is encouraging. The story is that almost every type of coat is good. Practically all of the houses stressed the separate coat, but they wisely kept in mind the fact that not enough people can wear severely fitted lines to make them universal, and a great diversity of models was offered. Some coats are belted, some wrap around, some flare, some are straight, some have flat fur and others have long-haired furs. In brief, it will be a season of individuality so far as coats are concerned. You may select the type most becoming to you, pleasantly confident that it will be a coat of fashion as well. For fall all black coats will be important, as they invariably are. Monotone tweeds will be seen in browns—especially a dark brown with a wine cast—in bottle greens and dark red and green coats.

The ever-growing tendency to dress according to occasion was recognized in the increased prominence given at the openings to light-weight woolen tailored dresses for daytime and in the greater development and elaboration of the late afternoon dress for formal afternoon and informal evening. There are no frills about the new tailored dresses. A great many of them have a coat look. They emphasize a trim waist with a narrow belt of patent leather or kid.

Pleats Are Effective.

The evening mode remains much the same so far as color is concerned, but new accessories give it new life. Turquoise and garnet are probably in for a run, Paton having sponsored the one—turquoise jewelry and turquoise blue slippers with a white frock—and Chanel the other. In general, accessories still harmonize with the costume during the day and contrast at night. Pleats, which vaguely threaten to supplant circular skirts altogether for daytime, make an effective appearance in some of the new evening dresses. Vionnet shows a new evening neckline, high in back and front, and drawn to the center. Fringe continues to be used more than had been expected. Lace is still very much in the picture, too, and travelers will rejoice. For no fabric suffers so little from being wedged into a suitcase between riding boots, a sports suit and a couple of new books.

The short evening wrap that is so wildly popular right now will be worn all summer, but it is a fashion too definitely dated to expect a long life. New wraps in the Paris collections are longer, and although some of them are still short in front they lengthen in back.

A number of new models seen at the Paris openings bring out some of the details mentioned. Vionnet's high-backed evening dresses in white crepe roma are attractive. Another of her creations, in banana color, has a bow with long ends, tied flippantly at the collar bone. One of her daytime dresses is simply made of gray crepe de chine but having great distinction, thanks to the fagoting, and the standing collar—for Vionnet insists upon a higher neckline for day as well as for evening.

Vionnet. Its ermine collar has a loop in back that falls into something first cousin to a bow.

An interesting model from Germaine Lecomte is a black frock which has a wide white jabot with a circular cut and similar shirred ruffles on the sleeves and these white touches show up just as prominently when you slip on the sleeveless cape jacket. A sleeve that is actually long but has a three-quarter look because of its elbow flounce is seen in a Marthe et Renee frock. This dress of black georgette with a white vestee also illustrates the new use of fringe on daytime clothes.

Shantung in Plain Colors.

Reversing the old combination of printed dress and plain jacket, new shantung dresses are appearing in plain colors, accompanied by fitted jackets of printed shantung. They are linked in different ways—one dress-maker uses print pockets and belt on her dresses. Sometimes the print of the jacket is echoed on the dress in the form of pipings, buttons and buttonholes. Or the background color of the print may be repeated in the frock and further emphasized by harmonizing accessories.

There is no question but that shantung will be much worn both in town and in the country this summer. Little tailored suits in navy and black are appearing. In bright colors and pastels it will be popular in the country and at the beaches, but one of the smartest possible combinations will be white with touches of high color in the accessories. The dress and jacket costume of cream-colored shantung, oyster white or palest blue green gives every indication of being a summer classic—an honor that it merits by reason of its combined coolness and chic. Sometimes the jacket is lined with bright-colored silk, and a suede belt of the same shade marks the waistline.

The fashion for white with dark accents was illustrated in a window which displayed a white flannel suit with a short buttoned coat. The blouse, scarf, and casual bows on the sleeves were fashioned of a dark print, small white stars scattered on a navy ground.

The latest thing in Paris fashions is the dark frock with the contrasting top. Every one is showing them. Practically all Worth's new dresses have yokes, pointed front and back, and short cap sleeves in a lighter color and material. Lenief's tweed dresses have square-cut yokes of white crepe de chine that divide the bodice horizontally in two. Lelong shows a few draped contrasting yokes, but usually places his color division lower and shows the whole blouse or simulated tunic in a light color, while skirt and coat are dark. Maggy Rouff attaches a dark skirt to a light princess tunic that stops just below the hip bones. Lucile Paray runs her light yoke into the dark skirt in a long point front and back. Martial et Armand show light bib yokes, sometimes attached, sometimes detachable, as does Jeanne Lanvin.

Joe Bush Makes Good as Manager

JOE BUSH, Brainerd's World Series hero pitcher, is making good as a baseball manager at Allentown, Pa., and his team has brought to the city its first pennant gained in first half of season play in the Eastern League.

Bush always was a fighter and never gave up. A month ago Allentown was sitting in the cellar and it started climbing. The crucial game was the last one with Bridgeport where Bush showed his hitting prowess by hammering out a triple and shoving in the winning run.

Bush has always fitted in well in emergencies, delivering the goods. This goes back to the sandlot days in Brainerd, to St. Cloud where he took the Indian's place, to Missoula, Mont., where he actually pitched double-headers and where his trusty bat broke up the opposition; and on to the big show where he performed valiantly in World Series.

Bush had his heart set on doing something worth while in Allentown and previous to the baseball season he toured the whole region and addressed innumerable luncheon clubs, Chambers of Commerce meetings, fan gatherings, etc., to stir up baseball interest.

With a first half season pennant in its grasp, Allentown is stirred up something like Brainerd was in the old days when Bush was mowing down the Giant batters with his smoke ball.

The pitching wing is taking a well-earned rest nowadays, but his throwing arm and batting eye make him a dread for the opposition when he plays a fielding position.

Horse and Buggy Days Are Gone

THE old familiar crossboard sign posted on the railroad right-of-way at every crossing, "Stop, Look and Listen," was good enough in the horse and buggy days, says the Industrial News Bureau. The driver had plenty of time to gaze up and down the track as Dobbin plodded along over the bumpy road. Even though the driver was not alert to an approaching train, his trusty steed would generally sense and signal the danger himself.

Now that same old road and crossing is a stretch of glassy, smooth highway. Your motor purrs quietly and you roll at a speed often in excess of the train itself. The old "Stop, Look and Listen" crossboard is still there and is probably augmented by a more elaborate signaling device of one sort or another. Down the highway a short distance on your right you have passed the small sign with an "R. R." on it similar to various other signs used along the highway to mark schools, curves, etc. Generally you see these signs. Sometimes you don't, but flash across the track—if you are lucky. Then you look back to see if a train "was coming."

Many accidents occur at grade crossings where the railroad company has taken every precaution possible in the way of erecting standard signalling devices. The train hits an automobile, or just as often an automobile runs into the side of a passing train. The blame is buffeted between the dangerous grade crossing and the carelessness of the motorist.

Character Building in School

COMMENTING on the great school system of the nation and its untiring work of endeavoring to elicit from the leading minds of the universe formulas for improvement of the system and installing in the minds of the students better ideas, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools at Atlanta, Ga., where the national instructors are now in session, said:

"Work must have a place in every formula of teaching which seeks to build character in youth." He urged activity programs which stress tasks as a means to straight thinking and sound living. Work in early years which calls on both hands and brain he declared to be a source of power and moral character.

"In my opinion," Mr. Sutton said, "the manual training in our high schools, our shops, our home economics, our drawing, our designing, our home interior decoration and the many courses that have made for the teaching of arts and crafts have of themselves been among the greatest character building elements in our schools."

"If this same activity program can be carried into our language, our mathematics, and our science so that we shall elicit the interest of the child, we shall have created in that child love for truth, for honest work, for fair dealing and fair play that will abide with him throughout the years."—Princeton Union.

At Brainerd Country Club

THE Brainerd Country Club, as well as all other golf links in the Brainerd Lake Region, felt the influx of tourists during the triple holiday season just past.

At the local country club tourists on each of the three days numbered 50 or more and all expressed satisfaction with the course and its accommodations. The greens are in fine shape and very good scores were made. Driving by on State Trunk Highway No. 2 one noticed the large number of cars parked on the grounds near the club house.

Under the leadership of President George E. Trent, Sr., the Brainerd Country club is advancing rapidly in increase of membership and in a record for golf course improvements and other betterments. Every effort is being made to interest local citizens in the course. Every possible attention is paid beginners.

The club's next tournament is to be with the Little Falls golfers and members participating are devoting time and attention to perfecting their game.

Paving Will Not Increase Taxes

WHY do so many people insist on misunderstanding the system by which this state pays for its highways, says the Windom Citizen. They object to paving because they say it will increase taxes, when not one penny of highway funds comes from general taxes, but from the very vehicles which travel those highways. In turn the saving in operation costs of the vehicle makes a saving for the man who pays the paving tax, the auto owner. And another strange thing about this highway circle is the fact that as the auto owner improves the roads at his own expense, he uses them more and pays a higher gas tax, and others seeing the good roads buy cars and add their contribution. As long as no tax is to be paid for paving except by the auto owner, who willingly pays it, why should anyone oppose it? Let's have a hundred million bond issue today, Mr. Babcock, all to be retired from auto taxes.

HARD LUCK DUE TO CAMEL KICK

Ahmed Sure Had Run of Mishaps After Animal
Hoisted Him.

New York.—Ahmed Karn was sitting on a cane-bottom chair in the Seaman's Institute, down on the East river front. He was puffing a funny-looking pipe with a brass lid.

O. Henry once wrote a story about a fellow named Kearney. This Kearney was afflicted with chronic tough luck. Every time he took hold of any project it went into the ground, except when he tried to plow. Every ship he ever got on went down, except when he boarded a submarine. Kearney was just that way. He couldn't help it. Ahmed Karn also gets bad breaks.

It seems that Ahmed comes from the land of the Pharaohs. Twelve years ago in Schegg, Ahmed was kicked by a camel. When he recovered he found himself lying in a field alongside the Nile. Ahmed tucked up his tunic and took a train for Cardiff.

Meets Lady Snake Charmer.

In Cardiff Ahmed struck up a friendship with a lady snake charmer. She must have misunderstood his intentions because one afternoon a lawyer approached and told him he'd have to marry the girl. Ahmed left town in the middle of the night and went to London.

He signed up with an Italian ship, sailing for Genoa. Thirteen days later, when he landed, he was arrested as a war spy. When he finally got out of jail his ship was gone and so were his clothes. He took another ship, bound for Naples. The first night out she was torpedoed. In the escape from the sinking vessel Ahmed got into an altercation with the mate and was laid low by a bottle.

He got to Genoa and signed up with an English tramp, bound for Port Said. The rest of the crew were Chinese. Before he could get aboard ship Ahmed was waylaid by a gang of sailors. He got two black eyes and a broken nose and was thrown in jail for two months on a charge of attacking eight peace-loving sailors.

Cannibals Rescued.

Ahmed got out of jail and had to bribe his way into a job in a steamer. She was loaded with coal, and two days out a torpedo sent her down. Ahmed was plucked out of the water by a steamer headed for South America. South of the equator the ship rescued four men in a rowboat. They were cannibals, it developed, and the first night on board they tried to eat Ahmed without benefit of salt and pepper. A squall came up suddenly and saved him.

The gale swept the decks clean and a wooden tub hit Ahmed in the small of the back, putting him in bed for the rest of the journey.

In 1920, after varied misadventures, Ahmed found himself in Tampico working on an oil ship. He missed the ship one day and was arrested as a deserter. Finally he was released on bond.

Then Ahmed came to the United States. He had sad adventures in Port Arthur, Texas, and in California, altogether too numerous to mention. Eventually he reached Baltimore, where, in a speakeasy, his skull was fractured in a brawl.

Ahmed told his story, displayed his scars, and announced that he was preparing to leave New York on the first ship which would take him back to Egypt.

He has a reason for wanting to go back to Egypt. He wants to look up that camel. He's going to kick the living daylight out of the beast. That's the way Ahmed is.

He thinks the camel started it all.

Back Seat Auto Driver
Often Stops Accidents

Fresno, Calif.—After this when the back seat driver speaks up it is the better part of wisdom to listen.

Authority for this statement is no less than Leon Whitsell, state railroad commissioner, and a man who dotes on backing up his statements with statistics.

In a luncheon talk here, Whitsell said that in 60 per cent of all railroad grade crossing accidents in California there was only one occupant of the car involved, and therefore no opportunity for a "back seat driver" to warn the real driver.

Whitsell said it merely boiled down to the fact that four eyes are better than two, and that frequently the oft-scorned "back seat driver" is responsible for preventing accidents.

GENTLE BULL IS BIG FARM MENACE

Vicious Animal Is Usually Watched Very Closely.

"Bulls with bad reputations must be watched closely, and it is the so-called gentle bull, not the vicious one, that most certainly kills his victim," says Prof. H. A. Hopper of the New York Agricultural college at Ithaca.

"In spite of the fact that men must know they are no match for a bull, they continue to take unnecessary chances."

Very few bulls are kept long enough in service. They must be seven years old before their daughters are mated, and a sufficient number to indicate the quality of the removal of bulls could be prevented by providing proper equipment for handling them.

To get a normal increase in the size of herds, service must be dependable. When this is not the case, much time is lost between lactations, and the breeding efficiency of the herd is low.

Every herd sire should have an open yard, strongly fenced, and a sanitary stall, according to Professor Hopper. As it is both costly and dangerous to give mature bulls the necessary exercise on the staff, many are trained to work in a trend power. The younger bulls, when turned out together, will furnish exercise for each other.

Young bulls should be trained to behave on a staff and may be safely handled thus for a short time. As they reach maturity, they should be confined to a well-balanced pen and yard.

The use of gates, narrow passages, and doors controlled by ropes or cables allows the caretaker to do all the work about a bull without coming in contact with him. The use of a breeding rack, when properly installed, contributes to safety and good results.

The keeping of bulls can easily be made less hazardous. With a safety bull pen, all dangers can be entirely eliminated, said Professor Hopper.

Poor Time Now to Grow
Unpromising Dairy Calf

This year is about the poorest time the world has known to rear an unpromising calf, warns H. A. Hopper of Cornell University. Stunted calves are difficult to bring to full sized cows, and anything short of that will be discriminated against by critical buyers, he says.

If the calf is well bred and has been brought to the weaning period successfully, a relatively small amount of consistent attention will finish the job satisfactorily. The cheapest gains are put on at an early age. That means to feed plenty of hay and grain well up to the heifer's capacity from the start.

Heifers should be fed for growth rather than to become unduly fat. In addition to legume hay and four or five pounds of silage, two to three pounds of a grain mixture should be fed daily. The following grain mixture is satisfactory for growing heifers: 300 pounds of corn and barley, 300 pounds of oats, 300 pounds of bran, and 100 pounds of oil meal.

No Trouble From Bloat
Pasturing Sweet Clover

In pasturing sweet clover there should be no trouble from bloat if cows are well filled on dry hay before turning out the first time. Then keep them on sweet clover, rain or shine.

If by any chance the dairy cows become very hungry before turning out they should again be filled on dry hay. A straw stack in a sweet clover pasture is a good insurance against bloat. If cows do not care for grain due to being too well filled on pasture their grazing time should be restricted. Rotation of pastures to keep the growth down, but not to kill out, adds to the protein content of the pasture and to the good the dairy cow can receive from a given piece of ground.

Feeding Cows Grain

In feeding grain to cows on abundant pasture the grain mixture can be made up of relatively small amounts of high-protein concentrates. The following grain mixtures have proved satisfactory: Mixture No. 1—100 pounds cornmeal, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 25 pounds cottonseed meal. Mixture No. 2—400 pounds cornmeal, 100 pounds cotton seed meal, 100 pounds ground oats, and 100 pounds wheat bran. Mixture No. 3—100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds ground oats, and 50 pounds cornmeal.

Craving for Salt

The craving of dairy cattle for common salt is based upon a real need of the body. The dairy cow uses salt in proportion to the feed consumed; in other words, the high producer will need more than the low producer. The most common plan of supplying salt is to keep it before the animals at all times, in the form of ordinary stock salt. Other dairymen prefer to mix it with the grain, usually at the rate of one pound per 100 pounds of grain mixture.

POPULAR RADIO STARS

Heard Twice Weekly Through
More than 30 Stations

THIS charming young lady is one of the featured stars appearing frequently on a new series of radio programs which will be broadcast through more than thirty mid-western radio stations. These new programs are popular in appeal, including new songs, old-time melodies, folk songs, tunes from popular pictures and shows of this season as well as the well-remembered melodies of operettas and musical comedies of several seasons ago.

New Musical Arrangements

Special arrangements are used in many of the orchestral numbers. There are violin solos, banjo solos, xylophone solos and many beautiful ensemble numbers. The orchestra includes Victor recording artists and musicians from many favorite radio orchestras. In addition to the above young lady, a soprano with an unusually pleasing voice, you will hear tenor and baritone solos and several selections by an outstanding male quartette.

Over Thirty Stations

These programs are sponsored by the Skelgas Utility Division of Skelly Oil Company. The programs will be broadcast through the following stations, twice weekly: WCCO, Minneapolis; WIO, Des Moines; KVOO, Tulsa; WNAX, Yankton; KSOO, Sioux Falls; KMMJ, Clay Center; WTAO, Eau Claire; KMBG, Kansas City; WOW, Omaha; WDAY, Fargo; WBBZ, Pierre; KFLY, Rockford; KFJY, St. Louis; KMOX, St. Louis; KFH, Wichita; KFJB, Marshalltown; WJAG, Norfolk; KFJM, Grand Forks; KFRU, Columbia; KMA, Shenandoah; KFAB, Lincoln; WKY, Oklahoma City; WCBSS, Springfield; KSCI, Sioux City; WIBA, Madison; KNTN, Mount Airy; WTMJ, Milwaukee; WLS, Chicago; WIBW, Topeka; KFEQ, St. Joseph; KGBZ, York; WBC, Duluth; KFKB, Miford; WOWO, Ft. Requeening for Better Colonies

Good Time to Plan for Increased Number of Young Insects.

Now is a good time to put a good young queen bee into each colony, suggests F. B. Mencham, entomologist at State college. This will insure a good number of young bees for the winter and a rapid building up of the colony next spring.

"Where black or hybrid bees are kept, a new Italian queen will change them into Italian colonies in two or two and a half months," states Mr. Mencham. "It is best to get the new queens as near home as possible so as to avoid the long confinement in shipment."

Find Old Queen.

In introducing a new queen into a colony, the bees accept her best when well fed. The old queen and queen cells should be destroyed. The old queen can be found by carefully looking over the combs, by smoking and drumming the bees into an empty super. A queen excluder should then be slipped underneath the super and the bees smoked back. The queen will be found trying to get through the excluder. After she is found and destroyed the hive is assembled as before. Where bees are inclined to rob each other, it is best to requeen late in the afternoon so that night will stop any robbing that has started.

Rob Hives Too Close.

M. Mencham states that it is a common practice among many beekeepers to "rob" the hives too close for best results. Each colony should have at least fifteen pounds of honey always on hand and where this is not left, the colony either dies during the winter or comes out in the spring too weak to store any surplus honey. Do not depend on the summer and fall honey plants to furnish this winter supply as in many cases these plants yield very little honey, he states.

Joe Bush Makes Good as Manager

JOE BUSH, Brainerd's World Series hero pitcher, is making good as a baseball manager at Allentown, Pa., and his team has brought to the city its first pennant gained in first half of season play in the Eastern League.

Bush always was a fighter and never gave up. A month ago Allentown was sitting in the cellar and it started climbing. The crucial game was the last one with Bridgeport where Bush showed his hitting prowess by hammering out a triple and shoving in the winning run.

Bush has always fitted in well in emergencies, delivering the goods. This goes back to the sandlot days in Brainerd, to St. Cloud where he took the Indian's place, to Missoula, Mont., where he actually pitched double-headers and where his trusty bat broke up the opposition; and on to the big show where he performed valiantly in World Series.

Bush had his heart set on doing something worth while in Allentown and previous to the baseball season he toured the whole region and addressed innumerable luncheon clubs, Chambers of Commerce meetings, fan gatherings, etc., to stir up baseball interest.

With a first half season pennant in its grasp, Allentown is stirred up something like Brainerd was in the old days when Bush was mowing down the Giant batters with his smoke ball.

The pitching wing is taking a well-earned rest nowadays, but his throwing arm and batting eye make him a dread for the opposition when he plays a fielding position.

Horse and Buggy Days Are Gone

THE old familiar crossboard sign posted on the railroad right-of-way at every crossing, "Stop, Look and Listen," was good enough in the horse and buggy days, says the Industrial News Bureau. The driver had plenty of time to gaze up and down the track as Dobbin plodded along over the bumpy road. Even though the driver was not alert to an approaching train, his trusty steed would generally sense and signal the danger himself.

Now that same old road and crossing is a stretch of glassy, smooth highway. Your motor purrs quietly and you roll at a speed often in excess of the train itself. The old "Stop, Look and Listen" crossboard is still there and is probably augmented by a more elaborate signaling device of one sort or another. Down the highway a short distance on your right you have passed the small sign with an "R. R." on it similar to various other signs used along the highway to mark schools, curves, etc. Generally you see these signs. Sometimes you don't, but flash across the track—if you are lucky. Then you look back to see if a train "was coming."

Many accidents occur at grade crossings where the railroad company has taken every precaution possible in the way of erecting standard signaling devices. The train hits an automobile, or just as often an automobile runs into the side of a passing train. The blame is buffeted between the dangerous grade crossing and the carelessness of the motorist.

Character Building in School

COMMENTING on the great school system of the nation and its untiring work of endeavoring to elicit from the leading minds of the universe formulas for improvement of the system and installing in the minds of the students better ideas, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools at Atlanta, Ga., where the national instructors are now in session, said:

"Work must have a place in every formula of teaching which seeks to build character in youth." He urged activity programs which stress tasks as a means to straight thinking and sound living. Work in early years which calls on both hands and brain he declared to be a source of power and moral character.

"In my opinion," Mr. Sutton said, "the manual training in our high schools, our shops, our home economics, our drawing, our designing, our home interior decoration and the many courses that have made for the teaching of arts and crafts have of themselves been among the greatest character building elements in our schools."

"If this same activity program can be carried into our language, our mathematics, and our science so that we shall elicit the interest of the child, we shall have created in that child love for truth, for honest work, for fair dealing and fair play that will abide with him throughout the years."—Princeton Union.

At Brainerd Country Club

THE Brainerd Country Club, as well as all other golf links in the Brainerd Lake Region, felt the influx of tourists during the triple holiday season just past.

At the local country club tourists on each of the three days numbered 50 or more and all expressed satisfaction with the course and its accommodations. The greens are in fine shape and very good scores were made. Driving by on State Trunk Highway No. 2 one noticed the large number of cars parked on the grounds near the club house.

Under the leadership of President George E. Trent, Sr., the Brainerd Country club is advancing rapidly in increase of membership and in a record for golf course improvements and other betterments. Every effort is being made to interest local citizens in the course. Every possible attention is paid beginners.

The club's next tournament is to be with the Little Falls golfers and members participating are devoting time and attention to perfecting their game.

Paving Will Not Increase Taxes

WHY do so many people insist on misunderstanding the system by which this state pays for its highways, says the Windom Citizen. They object to paving because they say it will increase taxes, when not one penny of highway funds comes from general taxes, but from the very vehicles which travel those highways. In turn the saving in operation costs of the vehicle makes a saving for the man who pays the paving tax, the auto owner. And another strange thing about this highway circle is the fact that as the auto owner improves the roads at his own expense, he uses them more and pays a higher gas tax, and others seeing the good roads buy cars and add their contribution. As long as no tax is to be paid for paving except by the auto owner, who willingly pays it, why should anyone oppose it? Let's have a hundred million bond issue today, Mr. Babcock, all to be retired from auto taxes.

HARD LUCK DUE TO CAMEL KICK

Ahmed Sure Had Run of Mishaps After Animal Hoisted Him.

New York.—Ahmed Karn was sitting on a cane-bottom chair in the Seaman's Institute, down on the East river front. He was puffing a funny-looking pipe with a brass lid.

O. Henry once wrote a story about a fellow named Kearney. This Kearney was afflicted with chronic tough luck. Every time he took hold of any project it went into the ground, except when he tried to plow. Every ship he ever got on went down, except when he boarded a submarine. Kearney was just that way. He couldn't help it. Ahmed Karn also gets bad breaks.

It seems that Ahmed comes from the land of the Pharos. Twelve years ago in Schegg, Ahmed was kicked by a camel. When he recovered he found himself lying in a field alongside the Nile. Ahmed tucked up his tunic and took a train for Cardiff.

Meets Lady Snake Charmer.

In Cardiff Ahmed struck up a friendship with a lady snake charmer. She must have misunderstood his intentions because one afternoon a lawyer approached and told him he'd have to marry the girl. Ahmed left town in the middle of the night and went to London.

He signed up with an Italian ship, sailing for Genoa. Thirteen days later, when he landed, he was arrested as a war spy. When he finally got out of jail his ship was gone and so were his clothes. He took another ship, bound for Naples. The first night out she was torpedoed. In the escape from the sinking vessel Ahmed got into an altercation with the mate and was laid low by a bottle.

He got to Genoa and signed up with an English tramp, bound for Port Said. The rest of the crew were Chinese. Before he could get aboard ship Ahmed was waylaid by a gang of sailors. He got two black eyes and a broken nose and was thrown in jail for two months on a charge of attacking eight peace-loving sailors.

Cannibals Rescued.

Ahmed got out of jail and had to bribe his way into a job in a steamer. She was loaded with coal, and two days out a torpedo sent her down. Ahmed was plucked out of the water by a steamer headed for South America. South of the equator the ship rescued four men in a rowboat. They were cannibals, it developed, and the first night on board they tried to eat Ahmed without benefit of salt and pepper. A squall came up suddenly and saved him.

The gale swept the decks clean and a wooden tub hit Ahmed in the small of the back, putting him in bed for the rest of the journey.

In 1920, after varied misadventures, Ahmed found himself in Tampico working on an oil ship. He missed the ship one day and was arrested as a deserter. Finally he was released on bond.

Then Ahmed came to the United States. He had sad adventures in Port Arthur, Texas, and in California, altogether too numerous to mention. Eventually he reached Baltimore, where, in a speakeasy, his skull was fractured in a brawl.

Ahmed told his story, displayed his scars, and announced that he was preparing to leave New York on the first ship which would take him back to Egypt.

He has a reason for wanting to go back to Egypt. He wants to look up that camel. He's going to kick the living daylight out of the beast. That's the way Ahmed is.

He thinks the camel started it all.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7.—Bobby Jones, defending national open golf champion, today started the serious business of final preparations for his first battle on Thursday in this year's contest.

As a Sunday pastime, Jones went around the Interlachen club course, where the tournament will be held, in par golf. Both rounds were made in 72. One stroke under par is the best that has been recorded on the present course which has been used for little more than a year. Jones, who had never played on the Interlachen course, made two par rounds.

Sports writers today expressed the opinion that if the champion could make four rounds of par golf in the tournament, the championship would be his although he will face what he himself has called "one of the toughest and most severe fights to retain the title that I have had in any tournament."

Short holes seemed to trouble Jones most. He made the longer ones in par or under par scores but the short ones caused him to lose the advantages he had made in the under-par long holes.

Jones was not the only golfer to shoot 72 on the course where the championship will be decided. Johnny Farrell, holder of the national open title in 1928; Densmore Shute, Columbus; and Jack Collins, Los Angeles, all made the route in par.

Fred Morrison, Los Angeles, Southern California open champion, Sonny Rouse, Chicago; Ray Mangrum, Dallas, turned in 73.

Walter Hagen lead the golfers who made the course in two over par. Horton Smith, young professional who has risen to fame during his past two years of golfing, and George Von Elm, California star, were in Hagen foursome. Both had 75. Willie Kidd, professional at Interlachen and therefore host pro, the other member of the group, had 79.

Today was to be just another day for the group of golfing dignitaries who are gathering here for the first round of the open on Thursday. MacDonald Smith and Jack Hutchinson, two of the leading arrivals of Sunday, were to play their first full rounds at Interlachen today.

BODY OF LASSMAN FOUND IN LAKE

ATHLETE WAS FORMER ALL-AMERICAN FOOTBALL TACKLE, NEW YORK UNIVERSITY

Harrison, Me., July 7.—(U.P.)—The body of Alfred "Al" Lassman, 28, former all-American football tackle for New York university, was recovered from the waters of Long Lake near here today.

Lassman, a guest at Camp Wakelo, was drowned last night when his canoe capsized.

According to camp officials, it was not known that the athlete who was a good swimmer, had gone canoeing until the overturned canoe was found. A search for the body was started, but it was several hours before it was recovered.

Lassman still was recuperating from an injury he had received playing football, which had forced him to leave the game.

Alfred Lassman, better known to his classmates at New York university and to football fans throughout the country as "Al," became nationally prominent as a tackle on the N. Y. U. eleven until 1928, when he suffered a painful head injury during the game with Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh.

The injury forced Lassman, then captain of his team, to retire from school for treatment and he never graduated. He recovered slowly, and only last spring was able to go to work with a contracting firm in New York.

Lassman spent last winter in Miami, Fla., and, an expert swimmer, he rescued a drowning girl from the Atlantic ocean. The act brought him once more into the headlines of the papers, but he dropped from sight again until word of his death was received today.

MRS. RALPH LITTLE OF MINNEAPOLIS RETAINS HER TITLE IN 10,000 LAKES PLAY

Lester Bolstad, Golden Valley golf club, Minneapolis, has added another title to his string of links championships.

Defeating Jake Wetherby, Minneapolis golf club 3 and 2, Bolstad won the 10,000 Lakes golf tournament over the Breezy Point course late yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Ralph Little, Minneapolis, again won the women's title when she defeated Miss Donna Lyan, Bemidji, 4 and 3.

Although Wetherby held Bolstad even for the first nine holes, the latter's superior endurance and golfing excellence aided him to pile up a lead on the early holes of the second round. After shooting birdies on the first hole, Bolstad and Wetherby continued to play even golf until Wetherby was forced to drop the fifth hole when his ball was unplayable after lodging in a hollow tree stump.

Wetherby entered the finals by defeating the defending champion, Roscoe Fawcett in a close match that ended 3 and 2. Bolstad defeated Phil Halvorson of Minneapolis 5 and 4.

Honors in the first, second and third flights of the men's meet went to Tom Walsh, Frank Rhame, both of Minneapolis, and Captain W. H. Fawcett.

Bolstad and Mrs. Little were medalists.

FRED NEWTON IN 2,500-MILE SWIM DOWN MISSISSIPPI

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—(U.P.)—Plowing steadily down the muddy Mississippi, Fred Newton, Clinton, Okla., was off today on the second lap of his 2,500-mile swim from Minneapolis to New Orleans.

Newton started yesterday at the Ford dam in Minneapolis and swam to Union Depot here. He plunged off the pier at the depot today and hoped to reach Hastings by nightfall.

Accompanying him in a skiff are his brother, Byron Newton, and James Patterson, both of Clinton.

The first permanent wave was found in excavations in Mesopotamia, a golden wig with the hair perfectly waved dating from about 3300 B. C., and it was worn by a man and not by a woman, according to Sir Frederick Kenyon, director of the British museum.

Superstars of Sport

By HARDIN BURNLEY

BOBBY JONES (Left), WHO STANDS ASTRIDE THE GOLFING WORLD LIKE A COLOSSUS.

GALLANT FOX (BELOW, WITH THE GREAT SANDE IN THE SADDLE), IS UNDOUBTEDLY THE BEST THREE-YEAR-OLD OF 1930.

EVERY now and then sport produces a winner of such a consistent and convincing type that the much-abused designation of "star" is inadequate as applied to—well, let's cite Bobby Jones in human realms and Gallant Fox among the animals. Jones in golf for several years and the Fox among the turf's three-year-olds—invincible individuals whose powers savor of the supernatural!

The triumphs of Jones are so fresh in the public mind that even those who don't know the difference between a stymie and a niblick, a birdie and a bunker, will mention his name immediately if asked: "Who is the world's greatest golfer?"

From June through June 1929-'30, Robert Tyre of the Atlanta Joneses, won the American Open championship, the British Amateur and also the Open, and the only break in this extraordinary chain of victories was his unlucky elimination by a relatively obscure player in the second round of the U. S. Amateur last September.

Three times winner of the British and American Open titles, always has stressed that opinion and recently the hard-boiled "Haig" (long acclaimed by many as "the greatest") stated that his Atlanta rival is the all-time king of golf—"a one and only," as the wise Sir Walter expressed it.

Tens of thousands who do not follow golf join in the acclaim to Jones. Likewise, fully as many, who care little for racing, join in the general delight over the sensational victories of Gallant Fox, whose fame is linked so inseparably with that of the great and popular jockey—Earl Sande.

As a two-year-old in 1929, the Fox was only a fair thoroughbred, but, this season, he's proved the greatest equine attraction since Man o' War and Zev had the railbirds and millions of others raving.

In rapid succession, Sande "booted in" the Fox to win the Wood Memorial, Prekness, Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes. If the Gallant One can win four or five more fairly good purses, his earnings should exceed the record held by Zev.

Sport has a few other superstars, but none more consistently brilliant in their fields than Bobby Jones and Gallant Fox.

Somebody Cares by A. J. Dunlap

The old plow hit a snag one day,
And in an angry fit
Exclaimed, "Oh! What a life I lead!
It's time for me to quit.
They drag me through the stubble field;
Until I'm nearly dead,
And no one cares how hard I work,
The old plow sadly said.

An autumn zephyr heard the plow,
And cried, "Oh! What a pity
You cannot follow me about
Through countryside and city.
Why, everywhere, the children sing
About your patient toil,
And everybody praises you,
And how you turn the soil."

The zephyr said, "I must be gone,
But I am sure somehow
The old world knows and cares a lot
About your work, Friend Plow.

They like to feel that someone cares
About them now and then.

WINS FIRST HALF IN EASTERN LEAGUE, FIGHT TO FINISH

A MONTH AGO THE ALLENTOWN TEAM WAS IN SEVENTH PLACE

BUSH'S TRIPLE IN LAST GAME, BREAKS 4-4 TIE WITH BRIDGEPORT TEAM

Allentown, Pa., sports its first baseball championship, says the Allentown Morning Call in a front page story presenting pictures of the team and the "Smile of Victory" lighting up the countenance of Bullet Joe Bush, manager and Brainerd's original world series performer.

Bush's triple broke up the 4 to 4 tie in the last game. The players danced around, patted each other on the back and took turns congratulating Bush.

In his own office in the club house, Manager Bush was as happy as a two-year-old kid. Once he forgot he had a charley-horse and started dancing around with the rest of the gang, but a sharp twang in his leg brought him over to a chair in a hurry. Then little Earl Weaver, the club's mascot, and Johnny Goltz, the bat boy, came in to congratulate Manager Bush on winning the championship, and the Allentown manager picked up both youngsters and held them in his arms for a minute.

The paper states that the victory of the Buffaloes assured the Allentown team of being one of the two teams competing in the post-season play-off series for the Eastern League championship, providing some other team than Allentown wins the second half crown. Should Allentown repeat in the second half season a post-season play-off would be unnecessary.

"Say, I've been up in the big leagues though the players in that event would receive $2,000 from the Eastern League just the same as if they had competed in a play-off series.

Allentown with a population of over 75,000, has a championship team today it may well be proud of. Although there are other teams in the circuit regarded as superior to Allentown in offensive and defensive strength, there is no team in the circuit superior to the Buffaloes when it comes down to a real fight for ball games. This can best be attested by the performances of Manager Bush's club in the last three weeks of the first-half season.

A month ago the Allentown club was in seventh place, but it was just about that time that the team started climbing. Gradually the club worked its way through the other contenders up the ladder, and then with a great spurt which saw the Allentown club win fourteen of its last sixteen games in the first half season, finish out in front on the last day of the first half, race. The 2 games lost were hard fought extra inning affairs.

Bush's triple broke up the 4 to 4 tie in the last game. The players danced around, patted each other on the back and took turns congratulating Bush.

GALLANT FOX (below with the great sande in the saddle), is undoubtedly the best three-year-old of 1930.

SPORT BUG.

EVERY now and then sport produces a winner of such a consistent and convincing type that the much-abused designation of "star" is inadequate as applied to—well, let's cite Bobby Jones in human realms and Gallant Fox among the animal athletes. Jones in golf for several years and the Fox among the turf's three-year-olds—invincible individuals whose powers savor of the supernatural!

The triumphs of Jones are so fresh in the public mind that even those who don't know the difference between a stymie and a niblick, a birdie and a bunker, will mention his name immediately if asked: "Who is the world's greatest golfer?"

From June through June 1929-'30, Robert Tyre of the Atlanta Jones, won the American Open championship, the British Amateur and also the Open, and the only break in this extraordinary chain of victories was his unlucky elimination by a relatively obscure player in the second round of the U. S. Amateur last September.

Three times winner of the British and American Open Titles, and recently the hard-boiled "Haig" (long acclaimed by many as "the greatest") stated that his Atlanta rival is the all-time king of golf—"a one and only," as the wise Sir Walter expressed it.

Tens of thousands who do not follow golf join in the acclaim to Jones. Likewise, fully as many, who care little for racing, join in the general delight over the sensational victories of Gallant Fox, whose fame is linked so inseparably with that of the great and popular jockey—Earl Sande.

As a 2-year-old in 1929, the Fox was only a fair thoroughbred, but, this season, he's proved the greatest equine attraction since Man o' War and Zev had the railbirds and millions of others raving.

In rapid succession, Sande "booted in" the Fox to win the Wood Memorial, Preakness, Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes. If the Gallant One can win four or five more fairly good purses, his earnings should exceed the record held by Zev.

Sport has a few other superstars, but none more consistently brilliant in their fields than Bobby Jones and Gallant Fox.

Taking Stores of Canned Foods on Board a U. S. Battleship.

FEEDING THE NAVY

WHETHER our legislators decide to build up our navy to actual parity with Great Britain or not, they are all in accord on one subject, and that is that the personnel of the aforesaid navy must be well fed. In an article in a recent number of The Canner, Frederick Krassner of the Brooklyn Naval Supply Depot reveals with what meticulous care the huge quantities of canned foods which our gobs consume are selected for them. The problem of meeting our Navy's requirements in this respect will be appreciated when it is realized that it purchases approximately 25,000 tons of canned products in the course of a year.

"The scientific progress achieved in the art of canning foods," says this article, "and the variety of canned products available are factors which are responsible for the widespread use of such products in the Navy. As a result, the enlisted man aboard a ship of the American fleet is now able to enjoy the full benefits of a well-balanced ration both in times of peace and in times of war."

"If they can, they can it." "The fundamental requirement to be met by all canned foods, as well as all fresh foods, for the Navy, is conformity with the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, and to the subsequent decisions of the Department of Agriculture. . . The Navy has its own set of specifications containing general and detail requirements for each specific item purchased."

The article then goes on to describe the Navy's method of sending out bids, and how samples of all canned foods purchased are submitted for inspection, and continues: "The well-known phrase, viz: 'If they can, they can it,' taken on an added significance in dealing with the Navy. Due to the variety of products required, there arise the problems involved in refrigeration and storage space on board a ship, which does not conveniently adapt itself to loading up with the greater bulk occupied by fresh products. This is particularly so in destroyers and submarines, where space is even more limited."

A Well-Balanced Ration
"However, without sacrificing practically any of the nutritional elements involved, or in any way impairing the physiological efficiency of the men, as borne out in recent studies made by commanding officers of ships and medical officers, scientific advances made in the canning industry have made it possible to utilize this large variety of products in liberal quantities. It should, of course, be borne in mind that for a given diet in order to be well-balanced in all respects, supplementary additions of available fresh foods such as milk, vegetables and other similar products are also used liberally."

The writer then goes on to describe the care with which the quality of canned foods is judged, and to enumerate the requirements of the Navy in this respect, and continues: "It will thus be seen that every precaution is taken so that Uncle Sam's Navy is well taken care of as regards the quality of canned foods purchased. It should, of course, be pointed out that the Navy's demands in these respects can usually be met by most contractors, the products obtained corresponding in general to the high-grade products used in the household."

Colossal Frozen Falls Unequaled for Beauty

Four thousand feet high and a mile wide—a solid mass of ice scintillating and gleaming with a myriad lights—the Hochstetter ice falls in the Tasman area of the southern Alps are one of nature's most marvelous sights. They fall from the Grand plateau and the Linda glacier and swell the volume of the mighty Tasman glacier three-quarters of a mile below. The eye of man has beheld no scene which is the peer of these colossal falls. Plunging precipitately down the rugged slopes of a mountain more than 12,000 feet in height, with a huge black rock in their midst as the only contrast to their dazzling purity, the falls are justly famed as nature's supreme gift to a beauty-loving world. One glimpse of such transcendent loveliness provides the awed observer with a lifetime of vivid recollections. There is every truth in the assertion that neither pen nor camera can convey an adequate appreciation of the glory of these falls, but in the minds of many people now departed over the seven seas they will ever remain an indelible and haunting memory.—Exchange.

Observe All Saints Day With Light and Music

In case any are further interested in the manner in which All Saints day is observed in Philippine cemeteries, we append the following additional characteristics of the annual celebration: The poor burn candles on the graves, while those who are financially able install electric lights. At night the cemeteries are seas of lights. Pictures of the departed persons are set up on the graves, and roving bands of musicians wend through the precincts and play pieces for them on the payment of 50 centavos (50 cents) by sorrowful relatives. The mausoleums of the rich are opened to the public, and long lines of persons course through them throughout the day and night.

The custom of playing lively rather than slow music in the cemeteries here is obscure, but it occurred during Spanish times. One story is that it originated during an appalling epidemic. People were dying by hundreds. The Spanish authorities, fearing the bad psychological effect of dirges, prohibited the playing of them.—North China Standard, Peking.

Memorable Blizzard

The storm of March, 1888, is generally known as the New York blizzard, and was one of the most severe ever experienced on the Atlantic coast. It was characterized by the rapidity with which its energy was developed and by the extreme precipitation, principally snow, which fell. The storm extended from Cape Hatteras to southern Massachusetts, obtaining its greatest violence in New Jersey, southwestern New York, Block Island, southern New England. The snow which fell was estimated at about 40 inches. Railroads were blockaded and telegraph and telephone communication stopped. New York was entirely cut off from all communication with the exception of the Atlantic cable.

BURIAL RITES MADE FOR WATER VICTIMS

Friends of Lafayette Gates Mourn His Death by Drowning at Funeral Today

LERKEY RITES AT AITKIN

Two Lose Live in Little Pine Lake When Wind Blows Boat Beyond Reach

Funeral rites for the two young men who lost their lives in Little Pine Lake near Emily when wind carried the empty boat they were swimming in out of their reach on July 4 were arranged today.

Services were held at Emily this afternoon for Lafayette Gates, 18 years old, of Little Pine township, Crow Wing county, one of the victims while the funeral of Renold Lerkey, his 13 year old friend will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at Aitkin, Minn.

The boys drowned within sight of two of Gates' younger brothers in six feet of water not more than 200 feet from shore. Lafayette and Renold had gone out in the boat near the center of the lake and then decided to go swimming. They dove off the boat, swam around and on setting out again for the boat found that the wind had carried it beyond their distance. They started for shore and became exhausted before reaching it.

Seeing the boys struggle in the water Gates' younger brothers ran to their home and told their parents. The only boat on the lake being in the lake, the parents were forced to go to Lake Marion for the relief boat.

Albert Humble of Crosby, deputy coroner, was immediately notified and with a number of men assisted in the search for the bodies.

The body of Lafayette was recovered at 9:30 p. m. and that of Renold at 11:30 p. m. the day of the drowning. Both deaths were caused by accidental drowning, a coroner's jury declared following the inquest at Crosby.

PROMOTED IN N. P. TIMBER SERVICE

A. J. Loom Succeeds Andrew Gibson as General Superintendent in Department

HAS HEADQUARTERS HERE

Levi Johnson Becomes Superintendent of Local Tie Treating Plant

Promotions affecting one well known Brainerd man and a former Brainerd man were announced today by Bernard Blum, chief engineer of the Northern Pacific railway.

The promotions place A. J. Loom as general superintendent of timber preservation and tie treatment for the N. P. and Levi Johnson as local superintendent of the tie plant. Both men will have their headquarters at Brainerd.

Mr. Loom worked for the N. P. at Brainerd between the years 1907 and 1919 and has been located at Paradise, Mont., since as assistant general superintendent of timber preservation and tie treatment for the N. P. He succeeded Andrew Gibson who retired under pension on July 1 after 47 years of service. George Hopkins, who has been assistant to Mr. Gibson at Seattle, becomes assistant general superintendent with headquarters at Paradise.

Levi Johnson has been employed for the N. P. at the Brainerd tie treating plant since 1910.

VISITS BRAINERD AFTER MANY YEARS

Thomas N. Putnam 44 Years Ago Was Foreman for Howe-Gleason Mill Company

THEN LEFT FOR NORTH DAKOTA

Prospered in Lumber Business, Became Political Power in North Dakota

Thomas N. Putnam who 44 years ago was a foreman in the Howe-Gleason Lumber mills in Brainerd, visited the city today, first time in nearly a half century absence. He found many changes in Brainerd, but most of all was astonished by the growth and wonderful improvements made in the Brainerd Lake Region. Streams which in the early days only carried logs are today bordered by beautiful cottages and resorts. Early this morning he motored to North Round Lake and visited at the Mahlum cottage.

From Brainerd Mr. Putnam removed to Carrington, N. D., where he engaged in the lumber business and prospered. He is a well preserved man, remarkably active and has become a power in North Dakota politics. He served in the senate and house before the days of the Non-Partisan League. He was recently nominated for the senate to represent Foster and Eddy counties.

Mr. Putnam paid the Dispatch office a pleasant visit and recounted old time experiences in Brainerd.

Three Bands Booked For Lum Park "Pav"

Three bands of high class reputation are booked to play at dances at the Lum Park pavilion in the near future. CHEATS POLICE OF LIQUID IN BOTTLE

Brainerd Man Crashes Bottle on Street When Chief Walks Towards Car

FACES MUNICIPAL JUDGE

Archie Hill Fined $10 for Littering 13th Street With Glass

Littering a public street constitutes one offence against the city of Brainerd. Carrying of liquor constitutes another.

But, irrespective of the charge, evidence is evidence and no perfectly good case is a case without it. Liquor fumes are no good unless bottled and what good's a bottle if it's shattered to bits.

Well here's the explanation of this banter as related in municipal court this morning when Archie Hill, a young Brainerd man was arraigned on a charge of littering a street with glass.

Chief of Police Thomas Templeton was driving along 13th street between Oak and Pine streets late Saturday afternoon. He stopped his car near another parked at the side of the pavement. He got out of his vehicle and started to cross the street. As he neared it a bottle was thrown from the car. It struck the pavement, smashing to bits. Liquid poured out. Fumes rose.

Chief Templeton explained to Judge J. H. Warner that the contents of the bottle smelled like liquor but that it was impossible to secure any of it from the street. On questioning he told Judge Warner that Hill was not intoxicated.

Hill was fined $10 or 10 days. He informed the court he did not mean to litter the street and that he offered to clean up the glass from the street.

Highway Patrol Officers Tell Court Defendants Tried to Get "Tough" When Arrested

Two motorists learned today that it doesn't pay to drive carelessly on state highways and that arguing with the Minnesota Highway Patrol doesn't help any.

Edward B. Torkelson, farmer, who resides 8 miles southeast of Brainerd and Victor Sipple who lives nine miles east of the city, were each fined $100 and costs in municipal court this morning on separate charges and pleas of guilty to careless driving.

The two were arrested by Officers Mieske and Morrison at Garrison the afternoon of the Fourth of July.

The officers said that both men had been drinking and tried to get "tough" when they were questioned.

Sipple was placed under arrest when he arrived at Garrison. The officers stated that his driving was a hazard to traffic was heavy. The man, according to the officers, argued and tried to "knock" the patrol.

Torkelson was arrested a mile south of Garrison after the officers had followed him and found he "was weaving across the road."

Mother and Daughter to Renew Acquaintances Here During Week of Show

LEADING LADY BORN HERE

Curtis-Christopher Players Open Tuesday With "Extra Dry"

A mother and her daughter, both talented stage actresses, will renew old acquaintances here this week when they appear as the featured players in the Curtis-Christopher Players opening a week's engagement Tuesday evening at their tent theatre at the corner of Sixth and Oak streets.

The mother is Mrs. S. B. Christopher who is known in the theatre world as Erma Brent while the daughter is Jerry Christopher, leading lady of the stock company and featured dancer and entertainer in the vaudeville presentations.

Mrs. Christopher is known to old residents of Brainerd and has appeared before several clubs in the city. She lived in this city a number of years while her daughter, Jerry, grew to young womanhood.

Jerry was born in Brainerd and attended local schools. Her career as an actress was inspired by seeing her mother before the footlights. While a young child she took dancing instructions and learned diction from her mother. She attracted attention as a dancer and was selected by directors for roles in the talking pictures of "The Desert Song," "The Great Gabbo," "The Dream of Love," "Show of Shows," "Broadway Melody," "Broadway," "Happy Days," and "The Dance of Life."

The company opens its engagement in Brainerd tomorrow evening with "Extra Dry."

Curtis V. Moe, male lead, has directed and played leads in his own and other companies for ten years. He is recognized as a clever performer.

Other members of the company include Edward Jason who recently concluded an engagement at the National Theatre, Chicago; Bill Davidson, entertainer and vaudeville artist who conducted N. P. programs during the past winter for KSTP; Ralph B. Holter, the boy wonder violinist who will study under Spaulding in New York next fall; Ken Wilson, Edwin Ojala, Paul Day and Anna Young who appeared as leading lady in "The Patsy."

THREE TRAVEL 470 MILES IN 23 HOURS

Brainerd Party Starts Out on Trip and Finds It Breaks Local Endurance Mark

Three Brainerd people have set an endurance mark in automobile driving on one stretch that will be hard to beat.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Larson, their son Roger and Hallett Clarkson, left Brainerd at 3:50 a. m. Sunday. They drove to Millbank, S. D., where Roger joined a party of friends on a trip through the Black Hills. The three returned to Brainerd at 2:30 a. m. today after witnessing a horse racing program at Millbank. The total distance covered was 470 miles.

Mr. Larson reported today that while he was a little tired he enjoyed the trip greatly. He said that the crops along the way look exceptionally good and that the weather at Millbank was 102 degrees.

Planning to publish the most complete listing of names ever recorded in a Brainerd directory, J. C. Terry, representative of R. L. Polk and Co., directory publishers, was in the city today arranging advance work preparatory to the gathering of material by a crew of men to arrive late this month. Included in the new directory will be a list of rural farmers and the possibility of adding Crosby and Ironton under their respective names is also under consideration.

The new directory will include features entirely new to the local directory using public and will be standardized as to arrangement of contents, corresponding with the large city directories of the United States, Mr. Terry said.

"Where heretofore has been only a list of streets showing locations, this year will appear a panoramic view of each street, name, location, a numerical progression of all house numbers, the head of each or the name of the business and all intersecting streets written in but their respective crossing points," Mr. Terry announced.

BURIAL RITES MADE FOR WATER VICTIMS

Friends of Lafayette Gates Mourn His Death by Drowning at Funeral Today

LERKEY RITES AT ATKIN

Two Lose Live in Little Pine Lake When Wind Blows Boat Beyond Reach

Funeral rites for the two young men who lost their lives in Little Pine Lake near Emily when wind carried the empty boat they were swimming in out of their reach on July 4 were arranged today.

Services were held at Emily this afternoon for Lafayette Gates, 18 years old, of Little Pine township, Crow Wing county, one of the victims while the funeral of Renold Lerkey, his 15 year old friend will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at Atkin, Minn.

The boys drowned within sight of two of Gates' younger brothers in six feet of water not more than 200 feet from shore. Lafayette and Renold had gone out in the boat near the center of the lake and then decided to go swimming. They dove off the boat, swam around and on setting out again for the boat found that the wind had carried it beyond their distance. They started for shore and became exhausted before reaching it.

Seeing the boys struggle in the water Gates' younger brothers ran to their home and told their parents. The only boat on the lake being in the lake, the parents were forced to go to Lake Marion for the relief boat.

Albert Humble of Crosby, deputy coroner, was immediately notified and with a number of men assisted in the search for the bodies.

The body of Lafayette was recovered at 9:30 p. m. and that of Renold at 11:30 p. m. the day of the drowning. Both deaths were caused by accidental drowning, a coroner's jury declared following the inquest at Crosby.

Levi Johnson Becomes Superintendent of Local Tie Treating Plant

Promotions affecting one well known Brainerd man and a former Brainerd man were announced today by Bernard Blum, chief engineer of the Northern Pacific railway.

The promotions place A. J. Loom as general superintendent of timber preservation and tie treatment for the N. P. and Levi Johnson as local superintendent of the tie plant. Both men will have their headquarters at Brainerd.

Mr. Loom worked for the N. P. at Brainerd between the years 1907 and 1919 and has been located at Paradise, Mont., since as assistant general superintendent of timber preservation and tie treatment for the N. P. He succeeds Andrew Gibson who retired under pension on July 1 after 47 years of service. George Hopkins, who has been assistant to Mr. Gibson at Seattle, becomes assistant general superintendent with headquarters at Paradise.

Levi Johnson has been employed for the N. P. at the Brainerd tie treating plant since 1910.

VISITS BRAINERD AFTER MANY YEARS

THEN LEFT FOR NORTH DAKOTA

Prospered in Lumber Business, Became Political Power in North Dakota

Thomas N. Putnam who 44 years ago was a foreman in the Howe-Gleason Lumber mills in Brainerd, visited the city today, first time in nearly a half century absence. He found many changes in Brainerd, but most of all was astonished by the growth and wonderful improvements made in the Brainerd Lake Region. Streams which in the early days only carried logs are today bordered by beautiful cottages and resorts. Early this morning he motored to North Round Lake and visited at the Mahlum cottage.

From Brainerd Mr. Putnam removed to Carrington, N. D., where he engaged in the lumber business and prospered. He is a well preserved man, remarkably active and has become a power in North Dakota politics. He served in the senate and house before the days of the Non-Partisan League. He was recently nominated for the senate to represent Foster and Eddy counties.

Mr. Putnam paid the Dispatch office a pleasant visit and recounted old time experiences in Brainerd.

CHEATS POLICE OF LIQUID IN BOTTLE

Brainerd Man Crashes Bottle on Street When Chief Walks Towards Car

FACES MUNICIPAL JUDGE

Archie Hill Fined $10 for Littering 13th Street With Glass

Littering a public street constitutes one offense against the city of Brainerd. Carrying of liquor constitutes another.

But, irrespective of the charge, evidence is evidence and no perfectly good case is a case without it. Liquor fumes are no good unless bottled and what good's a bottle if it's shattered to bits.

Well here's the explanation of this banter as related in municipal court this morning when Archie Hill, a young Brainerd man was arraigned on a charge of littering a street with glass.

Chief of Police Thomas Templeton was driving along 13th street between Oak and Pine streets late Saturday afternoon. He stopped his car near another parked at the side of the pavement. He got out of his vehicle and started to cross the street. As he neared it a bottle was thrown from the car. It struck the pavement, smashing to bits. Liquid poured out. Fumes rose.

Chief Templeton explained to Judge J. H. Warner that the contents of the bottle smelled like liquor but that it was impossible to secure any of it from the street. On questioning he told Judge Warner that Hill was not intoxicated.

Hill was fined $10 or 10 days. He informed the court he did not mean to litter the street and that he offered to clean up the glass from the street.

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

ON the eve of her marriage to Rodney Sayre, Emily Duane disappears. She had left her Hilldale Park home, "Knollwood," to visit the hospital, but never reached there. Foul play is feared when Jim Pennington reports his wife, Pauline, and Emily's best friend, also missing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

INVOLUNTARILY, Pete looked for footprints.

But none were possible on the hard, stony road, covered, too, with falling Autumn leaves.

The road—there was no footpath—led along a rather steep embankment, then across a bridge that spanned a wide and deep ravine, on to another bridge that crossed a smaller ravine, and then off to more level lands and a street which led to the Stevenson house.

Here Gibby was admitted, and soon greeted by a large, stalwart man of genial address and pleasant manner.

His errand made known, Alec Stevenson looked earnestly at him, and then asked him to go with him into his den.

There, with the door shut, his host told Pete that he had no use for the foreigner in question, but that Mrs. Stevenson was really daffy about him, and therefore he could say nothing to his disparagement.

"But what do you know of his standing, his history?" urged Pete. "Nothing, such an air of finality that it seemed useless to prod him further."

And, I suppose, Mrs. Stevenson knows no more than you do?" he said.

"No. Not of his past nor his sponsors. The women of the place here took him up, and in true feminine fashion they wanted no guarantee or references. Sorry not to be more helpful, but that's how it is."

But as Pete Gibby walked back through the starless, murky night, he remarked to himself that Friend Stevenson was one large and elegant liar.

Pete Gibby walked slowly back to Knollwood, thinking about Mr. Stevenson. He knew nothing of the man but what he had just seen for himself, but he was puzzled at his attitude.

On the face of things, it was all right for Stevenson to distrust the Swami, but to hesitate about saying so, since the Oriental was his wife's friend.

But Gibby sensed more than that. There was something furtive about Stevenson's manner that implied a deeper feeling about the whole matter than merely his wife's opinions.

"Oh, Lord," groaned Gibby to himself, "I'm a fine detective, I am! Running off with all sorts of fool ideas that have no basis whatever. If I'm going to look into this case, and I certainly am, I must be at least methodical and logical about it. Emily is missing, mysteriously missing, and so is Polly Pennington. Now, first of all, are they together, wherever they are, or separated? If the same influence is responsible for both disappearances, they are probably together. And I feel it must be the same influence. It's too extraordinary for a bride and her matron of honor to be wiped off the earth at the same time, unless by the same agent. But, granting that, where does it get me? Nowhere."

Gibby trudged along, his mind a blank as far as theories or deductions were concerned. Indeed, his detective instinct was decidedly embryonic, being merely a lover of detective stories, and a quick mind for solving their fictional problems.

A real question of mystery had never before come his way, and having one now plumped down before him, he was a little bewildered by his sudden opportunity.

So he gave a thought of real

He had crossed the bridge over the little ravine and was nearing the big ravine. These two bits of natural scenery were the pride of Hilldale.

The whole town was picturesque, the whole topography was hills and dales, but the two ravines were deep, jagged canyons whose rocks had been tossed up from the clefts in the earth by some prehistoric convulsion of nature.

The bridges across these were of a rustic sort, and over their railings vines had been trained by the Town Improvement Society, who took intense pride in fostering the fairness of their fair city.

Not really a city, Hilldale was a good-sized town and growing apace.

The shops and business section were some distance away from the residential Park, and the great estates of the landowners were jealously guarded from invasion of any modern improvements that might mar their natural beauties.

A fine motor road had been put through, but otherwise the roads and paths were almost primitive.

The houses, usually on a hill or rise of ground, were approached by walks of irregularly shaped flagstones or bits of marble. It was in no sense an old-time place, it was all modern, but it aimed for simplicity and good taste.

Sometimes adventurous climbers would go down into the ravines, but it was a wearisome, even dangerous trip, and few dared it.

Gibby had paused on the bridge as he crossed the little ravine and leaning against the stout railing, looked down into the dark abyss.

The thought struck him that Emily might have fallen over the rail, but he saw at once it was too high for that. Moreover, she had used the bridges all her life and would not dream of leaning over the side too far.

Yet he looked down into the black darkness, and determined that when it was again daylight, the ravines must be looked into.

A half-moon hung in the sky, but though it somewhat illumined the surrounding scene, its rays did not penetrate the black chasm.

He concluded to say nothing of this, however, for it was too remote a possibility and it would probably send the girls into hysterics.

So Pete Gibby went on, staring about him at the wooded hills and that scattered houses. Most of the houses showed bright lights, and from some he could hear sounds of music, or even laughing voices.

He knew few of them, however; only the young people who had been over to Knollwood for the rehearsal had he even met.

He glanced up at the Pennington house as he went on. Surrounded by trees it was on the side of a hill that ran down to the little ravine.

Only a few lights showed from its windows, and Gibby felt a wave of compassion for the man who sat there, as uncertain as to his wife's fate as they were about Emily's.

Pete was a bit intuitive, and he had sensed a slight hint of resentment in Pennington's attitude. It was almost as if Penn blamed Emily for Polly's disappearance. Almost as if he thought that Emily had urged his wife to go to the hospital to see the new baby.

And Pete had gathered that the sight of any baby was liable to send Polly off in one of her nervous spells, and that in such case she was more or less irresponsible.

So he gave a thought of real sympathy to the waiting husband and then his thoughts returned to their own tragedy.

For he had begun to look on it as a tragedy. Most certainly something had happened. What sort of happening it could be, he didn't know, couldn't even imagine. But it spelled trouble, and it was nearing a crisis.

Before he reached the house at Knollwood, he knew there was no good news there. If Emily had returned, the house would have been lighted up from top to bottom, whereas, there were only lights in the lounge and a few other rooms.

He went in and found Everett Craven was still there, but Rodney and Lamb had not yet returned.

"I don't like your old Stevenson," Gibby said to the lawyer, as he lighted a cigarette.

"Why not?" asked Craven, not greatly interested.

"I don't know. Sort of Doctor Fell, I guess. But he doesn't ring true. He says he can't abide his Oriental Nibs, but as he's a friend of Mrs. Stevenson's he has to swallow him."

"Well, that's about the size of it. And he's not alone in that. Some of these husbands put up with the obnoxious Lal Singh because he's a fad with the women."

"Nothing criminal about him, I suppose?"

"Not that I know of," Craven said. "I've looked him over pretty well, and he seems to me just out for the cash."

"Does he charge by the hour?"

"Oh, yes. That is, he gives an afternoon or an evening here and there, and expects and gets a goodly honorarium. It's all right if people choose to fall for it. He got around Emily in the matter of her will, but he didn't get any immediate money from her. Except of course, his own fee, when she engaged him for an afternoon."

"I suppose, Pete," Nell put in, "you're trying to fasten Emily's absence on Mr. Singh. If you only knew how ridiculous it makes you appear! Oh, I know you fancy yourself as a detective, but—"

"Hush up, Nell," said Betty, who was crying now. "I won't have you speak as if Emily had been kidnapped or something—"

"Well, where is she then?" Pete spoke abruptly.

But before anyone could respond to his question, Rodney and Lamb came in.

Their dejected air made inquiry unnecessary, and it was in silence that they let Prall take their hats and sticks and provide them with highballs and cigarettes.

"Something's got to be done," said Sayre, heavily.

He spoke as one in a dream of trance.

"You see," he went on, "something must have happened. Emily isn't at any house; we called at all the neighbors. She never got to the hospital, we've been there. We could find nobody who saw her or heard of her after she left this place. Prall saw her go out the back door, and that's all we know. Now, as the person most deeply interested, I feel I should take the helm. I'm not forgetting you, Aunt Judy," he said, with a sympathetic look at her. "but as Emily's future husband I feel I have a right to dictate."

"Of course you have, Rodney," Aunt Judy said, tremendously. "Whatever you think best to do, that you must do."

"I think so, and I propose to call the police at once and let them take up the matter. That is, to my mind, the only thing to do. The only argument against it is the unpleasant publicity of it. But I think the time has come to discount that. If Emily is all right, she will forgive us for getting so alarmed at her absence, and if she isn't all right, surely we want the help of the police."

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Stir Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Murder of Grand Duke Peter

SURROUNDED by a cloud of rumor and concealed in a haze of official secrecy, the murder of the Grand Duke Peter, husband of Catherine II of Russia, remains one of the many unsolved mysteries connected with that country, particularly since it is coupled with the personality of one of the most remarkable figures in the annals of royalty—Catherine the Great.

The story of Catherine II, the Semiramide of the North as her contemporaries delighted in calling her, is revolting not only because it is the story of a profligate woman but its deepest horror is to be found in the extreme corruption of the age and people to which the empress belonged.

Peter the Great said of his country: "Russia is rotten before she is ripe" and to realize the true meaning of these words and the fullness of their implication, one must study in detail the reigns of Elizabeth and Catherine II. Never was there such a mixture of squalor and magnificence as in the palace of the former. Fifth and splendor alternated throughout the royal apartments and the vilest food was eaten from plates of gold.

The first question concerning Catherine, therefore, is whether she corrupted Russia or Russia corrupted her when, as a girl of eighteen, she came from Germany to marry the Grand Duke Peter, heir to the Russian throne. At the time, the Empress Elizabeth, who ruled Russia as a usurper and kept the rightful czar in prison, was morally as corrupt as Catherine became in later years and added drunkenness, gross superstition, cruelty and insanity to her other vices.

Yet, at the mere word of this frenzied empress, torture or an exile that meant worse than death, could at any moment be pronounced as lightly and as easily against the heir to the throne as against the poorest peasant.

An even more revolting figure was that of the grand duke himself. A half-crazed savage in a wig and lace coat, "a swaggering, cursing, bawling, punch-swilling ruffian," a royal degenerate to whom nothing was sacred save his own wishes—these are some of the descriptions of the man to whom Catherine was given as wife. Left absolutely alone in such surroundings and with such a husband, there is little wonder that Catherine not only became corrupted but outdid the corruptions in which she found herself.

In daily and almost hourly peril from the insane fancies of the empress, Catherine may well have experienced the dreading effects produced by the loss of all security and, with respect to the question as to whether she might justifiably be accused of the murder of her husband, it is only necessary to refer to the notes of Wallisniewski, Polish historian who made a deep study of the facts in the case of this strange household.

"Peter remains the same gross, extravagant and insupportable being that he has always been," says Wallisniewski, "A strange brute streaked with insanity," according to St. Beuve's expression, and he still knows how to make himself thoroughly odious. Frequently he comes to bed drunk and, between hiccoughs, speaks to his wife of his favorite topics—his amours with the duchess of Courland, a hunchback, or with Frelina Voronstov, who is marked with smallpox. If Catherine attempts to go to sleep he pummels her with his hands and feet to keep her awake until sleep overcomes him. He is almost always drunk and becomes more and more daffy."

The first step in the downfall of this royal brute was his removal from the throne at the undoubted instigation of his wife, a removal which was followed by his virtual banishment to his country home at Ropcha where he died, officially of "apoplexy" but in reality as the result of a direct plot against his life. The fact that the murderers dared to act as openly as they did and that no attempt was made to prosecute them indicates that Catherine had shown that the permanent removal of the grand duke would not be distasteful to her. The truth about the affair has, however, never fully come to light, for Catherine had no need even to defend herself. Her rule was absolute and she doubtless destroyed any records which would tend to implicate her with one of the most infamous murder mysteries of the royal families of Europe.

Control Garden Pests

Garden pests require our constant attention to keep them in check. The cucumber beetle may do serious damage to vine crops before its presence is realized. It can be satisfactorily controlled by dusting with ashes, road dust, air-slaked lime or flour. Arsenate of lead mixed with the above, one part to six or eight of the above, will make the application more effective. Frequent applications early in the morning from a baking powder can will prove effective.

Cabbage Disease

A common complaint concerning cabbage is that although it may appear to start off well, its growth slows up and yellowing and wilting take place, and the plants finally die, at what should be heading time. The trouble is likely the "yellows" disease. This is soil trouble found usually in old gardens, and its only control is to use varieties which do not "take" the disease. There are yellows resistant, all seasons, incope and marion market.

Regular Hours Best

Keeping regular hours is necessary to good health. Nature will not be trifled with. Loss of sleep can never be made up, no matter how long a person may sleep later. It is even claimed that sleeping in the daytime is never as beneficial as sleeping at night.

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

ON the eve of her marriage to Rodney Sayre, Emily Duane disappears. She had left her Hilldale Park home, "Knollwood," to visit the hospital, but never reached there. Foul play is feared when Jim Pennington reports his wife, Pauline, and Emily's best friend, also missing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

INVOLUNTARILY, Pete looked for footprints.

But none were possible on the hard, stony road, covered, too, with falling Autumn leaves.

The road—there was no footpath—led along a rather steep embankment, then across a bridge that spanned a wide and deep ravine, on to another bridge that crossed a smaller ravine, and then off to more level lands and a street which led to the Stevenson house.

Here Gibby was admitted, and soon greeted by a large, stalwart man of genial address and pleasant manner.

His errand made known, Alec Stevenson looked earnestly at him, and then asked him to go with him into his den.

There, with the door shut, his host told Pete that he had no use for the foreigner in question, but that Mrs. Stevenson was really daffy about him, and therefore he could say nothing to his disparagement.

"But what do you know of his standing, his history?" urged Pete.

"Nothing, simply nothing," said Stevenson, with such an air of finality that it seemed useless to prod him further.

"And, I suppose, Mrs. Stevenson knows no more than you do?" he said.

"No. Not of his past nor his sponsors. The women of the place here took him up, and in true feminine fashion they wanted no guarantee or references. Sorry not to be more helpful, but that's how it is."

But as Pete Gibby walked back through the starless, murky night, he remarked to himself that Friend Stevenson was one large and elegant liar.

Pete Gibby walked slowly back to Knollwood, thinking about Mr. Stevenson. He knew nothing of the man but what he had just seen for himself, but he was puzzled at his attitude.

On the face of things, it was all right for Stevenson to distrust the Swami, but to hesitate about saying so, since the Oriental was his wife's friend.

But Gibby sensed more than that. There was something furtive about Stevenson's manner that implied a deeper feeling about the whole matter than merely his wife's opinions.

"Oh, Lord," groaned Gibby to himself, "I'm a fine detective, I am! Running off with all sorts of fool ideas that have no basis whatever. If I'm going to look into this case, and I certainly am, must be at least methodical and logical about it. Emily is missing, mysteriously missing, and so is Polly Pennington. Now, first of all, are they together, wherever they are, or separated? If the same influence is responsible for both disappearances, they are probably together. And I feel it must be the same influence. It's too extraordinary for a bride and her matron of honor to be wiped off the earth at the same time, unless by the same agent. But, granting that, where does it get me? Nowhere."

Gibby trudged along, his mind a blank as far as theories or deductions were concerned. Indeed, his detective instinct was decidedly embryonic, being merely a lover of detective stories, and a quick mind for solving their fictional problems.

A real question of mystery had never before come his way, and having now plumped down before him, he was a little bewildered by his sudden opportunity.

He had crossed the bridge over the little ravine and was nearing the big ravine. These two bits of natural scenery were the pride of Hilldale.

The whole town was picturesque, the whole topography was hills and dales, but the two ravines were deep, jagged canyons whose rocks had been tossed up from the clefts in the earth by some prehistoric convulsion of nature.

The bridges across these were of a rustic sort, and over their railings vines had been trained by the Town Improvement Society, who took intense pride in fostering the fairness of their fair city.

Not really a city, Hilldale was a good-sized town and growing apace.

The shops and business section were some distance away from the residential Park, and the great estates of the landowners were jealously guarded from invasion of any modern improvements that might mar their natural beauties.

A fine motor road had been put through, but otherwise the roads and paths were almost primitive.

The houses, usually on a hill or rise of ground, were approached by walks of irregularly shaped flagstones or bits of marble. It was in no sense an old-time place, it was all modern, but it aimed for simplicity and good taste.

Sometimes adventurous climbers would go down into the ravines, but it was a wearisome, even dangerous trip, and few dared it.

Gibby had paused on the bridge as he crossed the little ravine and leaning against the stout railing, looked down into the dark abyss.

The thought struck him that Emily might have fallen over the rail, but he saw at once it was too high for that. Moreover, she had used the bridges all her life and would not dream of leaning over the side too far.

Yet he looked down into the black darkness, and determined that when it was again daylight, the ravines must be looked into.

A half-moon hung in the sky, but though it somewhat illumined the surrounding scene, its rays did not penetrate the black chasm.

He concluded to say nothing of this, however, for it was too remote a possibility and it would probably send the girls into hysterics.

So Pete Gibby went on, staring about him at the wooded hills and the scattered houses. Most of the houses showed bright lights, and from some he could hear sounds of music, or even laughing voices.

He knew few of them, however; only the young people who had been over to Knollwood for the rehearsal had he even met.

He glanced up at the Pennington house as he went on. Surrounded by trees it was on the side of a hill that ran down to the little ravine.

Only a few lights showed from its windows, and Gibby felt a wave of compassion for the man who sat there, as uncertain as to his wife's fate as they were about Emily's.

Pete was a bit intuitive, and he had sensed a slight hint of resentment in Pennington's attitude. It was almost as if Penn blamed Emily for Polly's disappearance. Almost as if he thought that Emily had urged his wife to go to the hospital to see the new baby.

And Pete had gathered that the sight of any baby was liable to send Polly off in one of her nervous spells, and that in such case she was more or less irresponsible. So he gave a thought of real sympathy to the waiting husband and then his thoughts returned to their own tragedy.

For he had begun to look on it as a tragedy. Most certainly something had happened. What sort of happening it could be, he didn't know, couldn't even imagine. But it spelled trouble, and it was nearing a crisis.

Before he reached the house at Knollwood, he knew there was no good news there. If Emily had returned, the house would have been lighted up from top to bottom, whereas, there were only lights in the lounge and a few other rooms.

He went in and found Everett Craven was still there, but Rodney and Lamb had not yet returned.

"I don't like your old Stevenson," Gibby said to the lawyer, as he lighted a cigarette.

"Why not?" asked Craven, not greatly interested.

"I don't know. Sort of Doctor Fell, I guess. But he doesn't ring true. He says he can't abide his Oriental Nibs, but as he's a friend of Mrs. Stevenson's he has to swallow him."

"Well, that's about the size of it. And he's not alone in that. Some several husbands put up with the obnoxious Lal Singh because he's a fad with the women."

"Nothing criminal about him, I suppose?"

"Not that I know of," Craven said. "I've looked him over pretty well, and he seems to me just out for the cash."

"Does he charge by the hour?"

"Oh, yes. That is, he gives an afternoon or an evening here and there, and expects and gets a goodly honorarium. It's all right if people choose to fall for it. He got around Emily in the matter of her will, but he didn't get any immediate money from her. Except of course, his own fee, when she engaged him for an afternoon."

"I suppose, Pete," Nell put in, "you're trying to fasten Emily's absence on Mr. Singh. If you only knew how ridiculous it makes you appear! Oh, I know you fancy yourself as a detective, but—"

"Hush up," said Betty, who was crying now, "I've never have you speak as if Emily had been kidnapped or something—"

"Well, where is she then?" Pete spoke abruptly.

But before anyone could respond to his question, Rodney and Lamb came in.

Their dejected air made inquiry unnecessary, and it was in silence that they let Prall take their hats and sticks and provide them with highballs and cigarettes.

"Something's got to be done," said Sayre, heavily.

He spoke as one in a dream or trance.

Garden pests require our constant attention to keep them in check. The cucumber beetle may do serious damage to vine crops before its presence is realized. It can be satisfactorily controlled by dusting with ashes, road dust, air-slaked lime or flour. Arsenate of lead mixed with the above, one part to six or eight of the above, will make the application more effective. Frequent applications early in the morning from a baking powder can will prove effective.

Cabbage Disease

A common complaint concerning cabbage is that although it may appear to start off well, its growth slows up and yellowing and wilting take place, and the plants finally die, at what should be heading time. The trouble is likely the "yellows" disease. This is soil trouble found usually in old gardens, and its only control is to use varieties which do not "take" the disease. There are yellows resistant, all seasons, lace and marion market.

Regular Hours Best

Keeping regular hours is necessary to good health. Nature will not be trifled with. Loss of sleep can never be made up, no matter how long a person may sleep later. It is even claimed that sleeping in the daytime is never as beneficial as sleeping at night.

BILL BOOSTER SAYS:

AM IN FAVOR OF THE ANNUAL VACATION FOR EVERY ONE—TAKE A COUPLE OF WEEKS OFF AND SEE SOMETHING OF YOUR COUNTRY—IT WILL AIR OUT YOUR BRAIN AND DO YOU GOOD—AND WEEKLY DEPOSITS IN A "VACATION FUND" AT THE BANK WILL FINANCE YOUR TRIP.

Pessimistic Idea

No man is happy. Man strives all his life through for imaginary happiness, which he seldom attains, and if he does, it is only to be disillusioned.—Exchange.

Old Theory Abandoned

The bureau of American ethnology says that the Atlantis theory of the development of the Mayan civilization is no longer accepted by Mayan scholars.

Widely Separated

Zenith and nadir are both Arabic words, the first signifying the point of the heavens directly above one, while nadir denotes the invisible point directly beneath.
